Credit Curbs Expected To Slow Up New Homes

Contractors See Less Active Period With Older Houses Enjoying Boom

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

New Government curbs on the real estate market will put the brakes on new home building here and jack up the prices on second-hand houses, Washington area builders predicted last night.

The rules, issued Tuesday by the Federal Reserve Board and the Housing and Home Finance Agency, go into effect today. They drastically increase down payments and shorten amortization periods on home loans.

Building industry spokesmen and labor leaders were already demanding "relaxation" of the new credit curbs, declaring they would prevent low and middle income families from buying homes in the foreseeable future.

Clarke Daniel, president of the Washington Home Builders Association, said: "These really drastic new regulations will force the country into a building depression."

Will "Shift Inflation"

"In the Washington area these curbs will cut the volume of home building by a minimum of two thirds. The average-priced home here is between $13,000 and $14,000. Now it will take a down payment of $3500 to $3900 for a non-veteran to purchase that home. To think many people have that kind of money for that type of house is fantastic," he said.

"These curbs will also take inflation out of new construction and put it into old housing," Daniel added.

Said Alvin L. Aubelle, first vice president of the same association: "It (the new rules) will not only stop all home construction, but will force up the prices on existing houses."

Housing constructed before last August 3, and purchased without Government financial aids, is exempt from the new restrictions.

Many Profit from Loophole

The rulings did provide one loophole for builders of GI homes.

If these builders filed by last midnight a written request for Veterans Administration appraisal of houses now only in the planning stage they, too, will be exempt from the strict regulations. Many builders did meet the deadline, the regional VA office reported.

Frank Mace, a large builder of veterans' homes, said last night that he had thus committed himself for enough houses to carry his firm through the middle of 1951. "After that I may be forced to close my business," he said.

By simply requesting a later appraisal, these builders may sell homes to veterans for no down

N. Y.-Jersey Crime Links Are Reported

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (AP).—Senate crime probers began hearings here today and claimed to have uncovered a link between New Jersey gamblers and fellow operators in New Jersey's plush Saratoga County.

The hearing got underway without Joe Adonis, a key witness whose name figured importantly in the Jersey-Saratoga setup.

He failed to show up and the committee listed him as missing.

Adonis has been described by Federal authorities as one of the Nation's biggest gamblers.

Senator Estes Kefauver, chairman of the Senate Crime Committee, told newsmen four New York businessmen testified they were wined and dined in a Lodi, N. J., gambling center where they dropped up to $14,000 apiece in 1948-49.

Free Steaks and Drinks

"A free steak, all the drinks you want and limousine service to and from the city," was the slogan that lured the businessmen from New York City across the Hudson River to New Jersey.

Kefauver said the men told of seeing 150 to 200 persons gambling nightly at the Lodi establishment—a converted barn.

They said their checks were indorsed by James Lynch and stamped "Max Stark Special."

A Max Stark was sentenced to 6 months in jail last April after he was convicted of conspiring in New York State to violate New Jersey gambling laws. He is appealing the conviction.

Stark was accused of operating a multimillion-dollar check cashing service for New Jersey gamblers.

The Senator declined to identify his businessmen-witnesses by name "for obvious reasons."

The committee released a list of six companies which it said

FCC Approves CBS System For Color TV

By Sonia Stein
Post Reporter

Color television for commercial use was authorized yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission, effective November 20. The system chosen for use is the field sequential system, a method of transmitting color which was developed by the Columbia Broadcasting System and which is commonly called the CBS system.

No surprise, the FCC decision merely made official the FCC's promise of September 1 that it would authorize immediately the CBS system if certain specific conditions were not met. The specific conditions, that manufacturers begin producing receivers capable of picking up the CBS type of color broadcasts in black and white as well as the standard black and white programs, would have permitted the FCC to study the other proposed systems further in hearings tentatively scheduled for December 5 to January 5, without adding to the incompatibility problem involved in the CBS color system.

Present sets cannot receive CBS system color programs in black and white without minor modifications which would cost anywhere from $15 to $60, according to industry estimates. Since the manufacturers indicated to the FCC that they were "unable or unwilling" to adopt the bracket standards, the FCC said yesterday "we would be derelict in our responsibility to the public if we postponed a decision any longer." Had the manufacturers been willing to prevent the growth of the incompatibility problem by using bracket standards until the final decision was made, the FCC would have risked waiting several months longer to give the Radio Corporation of America, Color

Enginemen Ask 35-Cent Hike, 15 Other Unions 10 Cents Less

Labor Unions representing railroad firemen and enginemen decided yesterday to demand a 35-cent-an-hour wage increase.

A few hours earlier, heads of 15 unions representing a million nonoperating rail employes decided to ask for a 25-cent hourly wage boost.

The nonoperating unions, representing rail workers who do not operate trains, said they would serve formal notice of their demand on October 25.

G. E. Leighty, chairman of the nonoperating group, estimated his demand would cost the railroads 400 million dollars annually. He said it would add $10 a week to the average pay of workers in the railroad shops and offices across the Nation.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen followed up the nonoperating unions' demand by announcing it would seek 35 cents an hour. The 85,000 firemen and enginemen involved in the demand would get an increase of $14 a week in an average pay check of $65.

The nonoperating group of 15 unions include the shop crafts, telegraphers, clerks, signalmen, water service and dining car employes.

The wage demand will be the lone issue. A 25-cent hourly increase would mean a $10 boost in the present $60.15 average weekly pay of nonoperating employes. Their last increase was in 1948-49, when they went on a 40-hour week at 48 hours' pay.

3000 Railway Express Workers to End Strike

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 11 (AP).—A union official announced tonight that the 17-year-old Railway Express strike will end at midnight.

Thomas J. Murphy, secretary of Local 459, International Teamsters Union (AFL) said the 3000 men would go back to their jobs starting at midnight tonight. An agreement was reached between the teamsters and a board set up by President Truman.

Moch Arrives For Talks on Rearmament

Defense Minister Of France to Seek U. S. Financial Aid; Petsche Due Today

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Jules Moch, the strong-willed and hard-driving French minister of defense, arrived in Washington yesterday to seek American help for French rearmament.

He will be followed today by Maurice Petsche, the Minister of Finance, and the two ministers will have busy days of meetings with the highest officials of the State, Defense and Treasury departments.

Moch has been described as the most energetic war minister in France since Georges Clemenceau, the "Tiger" of World War I. Many Frenchmen call him "Moch-Arthur" because of his imperious nature and his fanatical hatred of communism.

He is also something of a fanatic about Germany, because his son was tortured to death in a Nazi concentration camp. He was the one French leader above all others who opposed a decision last month to use German units in a combined Western army, and as a power in the Socialist Party he was able to make his views prevail in the cabinet.

Not Likely to Relent

Moch is not likely to relent during the meetings here, for the French National Assembly reconvenes October 17 and faces a stormy debate over German rearmament.

If he agrees at all to the use of German units, he will not do it until after the debate, although American officials hope the French Cabinet will have made up its mind to do so before the full-dress meeting of the 12 North Atlantic defense ministers in Washington October 26.

Secretary Acheson yesterday reaffirmed his belief in the soundness of his proposals presented to the North Atlantic foreign ministers September 12. These were to (1) form a unified western army, including American divisions; (2) appoint a single commander or chief of staff and (3) include German units up to division strength under such a command.

He reminded his press conference that the progressive leaders of western Germany had asked to take part in the defense of western Europe. And he denied reports from Paris that at the New York meetings he had given the French an "ultimatum"—to agree to the use of German troops, or to do without the additional

Truman Sees World Peace Hope in Trip

Weekend Meeting With MacArthur May Further Aims, He Says in St. Louis

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 11.—President Truman, here on his way to the Pacific, said tonight he hoped his weekend meeting with General MacArthur will further "the peace of the world."

In spite of Far Eastern conflict, "we are making progress" toward a peaceful world, he told a closed meeting of the Eastern Star. He had stopped off here to see his 61-year-old sister, Miss Mary Jane Truman, installed as the Missouri head of the order. More than 12,000 persons were present.

Without naming Soviet Russia he took a slap at "totalitarian governments."

"The first thing that a totalitarian government does," he said, "is to abolish all such organizations as this, and persecute the members."

Contrasts Attitudes

He contrasted this attitude with that of free countries, "such as the United States, Canada and Great Britain."

The place where Mr. Truman and the five-star general are to meet "somewhere in the Pacific" still is an official mystery. White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said tonight that the point of rendezvous would not be disclosed until the presidential party reaches Hawaii Friday morning.

Mr. Truman's airplane, the Independence, landed at the St. Louis municipal airport at 6:37 p. m. after a flight of 3 hours and 7 minutes from Washington.

He motored to the Jefferson Hotel, had dinner with his staff, then changed into a black-tie outfit and went to Kiel Auditorium.

He's Former Grand Master

There he saw his sister installed as worthy grand matron of the Missouri lodge of Masonic women. The President is a 33d degree Mason and a former Grand Master of the Missouri Grand Lodge.

The Independence is to take off from St. Louis at 3 p. m. Thursday for the flight to the Pacific.

Russian Peace Proposals Win U. S. Go-Ahead

Nod Given Move For 5-Power Parleys, World Army Speed-Up

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 11 (AP).—The United States today accepted in principle Soviet proposals calling for five-power consultations on maintaining peace and for a speed-up of measures to set up an international army.

But the Americans made it plain that these two steps are provided for in the United Nations charter and should have been taken long ago.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky formally presented two resolutions to the U. N. Assembly's 60-nation Political Committee. One recommended that, until the international army is created, the five powers—France, China, Britain, United States and Russia—should consult on joint action for maintaining international peace and security.

The second resolution recommends that the Security Council decide on measures for the rapid creation of the international armed force provided for in the U. N. charter and for the effective operation of the military staff committee.

An American spokesman said the ideas contained in the two proposals might be written into the preamble of a seven-power resolution containing Secretary of State Dean Acheson's program against aggression.

This resolution now is being debated in the Political Committee and the seven-power-plan spon-

Acheson Asks Reds to Honor U. N. Decisions

Says U. S. Considers Sending Food To Hungry Yugoslavs

Secretary Acheson appealed indirectly to the North Korean leaders yesterday to reconsider their refusal to surrender.

He told his press conference that he still hoped second thoughts would prevail in North Korea, and that the Communist leaders should take the sensible and patriotic course of accepting the decisions of the United Nations Assembly.

The Assembly voted overwhelmingly last weekend for the unification of North and South Korea under U. N. auspices, and for the launching of a reconstruction program.

One who refused to be worried yesterday about Chinese intentions was Ben C. Limb, the foreign minister of the South Korean government. Limb emerged from a meeting with President Truman saying flatly that the Chinese Communists would not send military aid to the North Koreans.

Acheson disclosed the United States was considering sending food shipments to Yugoslavia to offset serious drought and shortages there. He said talks on the subject with the Yugoslavs had not yet gone far enough to show whether congressional action would be needed.

Undoubtedly, he said, it would be necessary to send food to Yugoslavia, and probably this fall.

Seeks Name Change for Morale

In the hope it will improve his "mental morale," Eustace Lenwood Womack, 3706 Bangor st. se., yesterday petitioned District Court to change his first name to Edmund.

In his petition, 43-year-old Womack said:

"I desire a change in the first name because of undesirable nicknames that are derived from it. I have found that very few persons have any desire to pronounce it correctly.

"I believe that by adopting the new name, my mental morale will improve."

Selection by Electronics

'Brain' Now Chooses for Boss When It's Job-Promotion Time

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

That brave new world hitched a notch nearer yesterday with the announcement that Du Mont Laboratories has acquired an electronic brain which "automatically selects employes for promotion ten times faster than methods now commonly used."

"Good Lord!—don't quote me," a Civil Service Commission personnel expert greeted the news. "But Good Lord! The robot age is here!"

The electronic brain, known familiarly as IBM Statistical Analyzer 101, relieves the boss of the arduous task of thinking, a development which some believe already has gone about as far as it can go.

The Brain automatically supplies the first, second and third choice for the promotion. In time perhaps The Brain will do away with bosses. Oh, Happy Day!

But, say the boss is undecided whether to give Jones, Smith or Brinkley that 50-buck-a-week raise.

He sits down at The Brain and feeds in the three men's "employe profiles." These include scores in psychological tests, special skills, hobbies, personal attributes.

The Brain grinds. Presto! Up comes Smith, No. 1 . . . Jones No. 2 . . . Brink - - - well, no matter

However, The Brain may make mistakes. So, Du Mont promises personal interviews before the final choice.

There's no limit to The Brain's magic. The Civil Service man recoiled from shock, told of another of its tricks.

Let us say that from his thousands of employes an employer needs a man, possibly for a top executive spot, who will fulfil some specific qualifications . . .

"For example, you need an employe who has blue eyes, red hair, wears No. 6 shoes, knows a little law, is a licensed pilot, can milk cows, take press photographs and translate Sanskrit . . .

"The Brain will turn up the cards of all employes with these qualifications and . . ."

Presto! Jones No. 1 . . . Smith . . . Bri . . . huh?

Oh, wonders never ceasing, Oh joy, that our brains need think no more. All hail The Brain!

But what if The Brain broke down?

Chaos! No promotions! Dissatisfied employes! Frantic, brainsterile employers! Offices everywhere coming to a stop . . .

"We plan to use The Brain in all cases," says DuMont, "with the exception of executives at the very top . . ."

Now just a minute, just a minute—if we're going to have this brave new world, let's really have it. Bosses, too. All electronic brains are manufactured equal. Equal robot-ing for all, we say, wheels included.

Waring's home was pelted with missiles last Monday night. The judge and Mrs. Waring have criticized segregation of Negroes. In 1947 he ruled Negroes should be permitted to take part in the Democratic primary in South Carolina.

Listing by U. S. as Subversive Is Final, Supreme Court Told

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The only way an organization can get its name taken off the Government's subversive list is to have "the people elect another President who will appoint another Attorney General who will take it off."

That remedy was offered to the Supreme Court yesterday by Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman during arguments on four cases testing constitutionality of the President's loyalty program for Government workers.

Justice Hugo L. Black asked if the Catholic Church could be put on the list, made up by the Attorney General. Perlman said it could. Justice Robert H. Jackson commented that in the days of the anti-Catholic Know-Nothing Party the church undoubtedly would have been listed. When Jackson asked how the church could "get off the list"—if it were named, Perlman suggested the Presidential election route as the only one open.

Black asked what "relief" a business firm would have if it were put on the list. Pearlman replied "none." This question came during discussion of a listed group which is in the insurance business.

Perlman's contention was the Attorney General has the right on his own findings to list any organization and no group listed has a right of hearing or appeal. Perlman said individuals likewise could be listed without hearing or appeal.

The court was considering appeals by the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, National Council of American-Soviet Friendship and International Workers Order, all listed and all contending they had a right to a hearing before such listing. They all denied being "subversive."

The court began hearing arguments in the Dorothy Bailey case, also testing the loyalty program. Paul Porter, former OPA head and one of Miss Bailey's attorneys, called the fired Government worker "a tragic victim of the hysteria of our times." He said the Loy-

Three Cities Captured; Eighth Army Drives Ahead

Yanks, Australians And British Plunge 12 Miles Above Line In Thrust at Capital

TOKYO (Thursday), Oct. 12 (AP). — United States Eighth Army forces advanced deeper into North Korea today along a curving 135-mile front after wresting a key defense triangle from fiercely resisting Reds.

Eighth Army headquarters announced that Southern Korean troops near the center of the line captured the highway and railway hubs of Kumwha, Chorwon and Pyonggang. The Republic's soldiers pressed on northward this morning from their point of deepest penetration—Pyonggang, 28 miles above the 38th parallel.

Near the west end of the line, tank-supported American troops punched 12 miles into North Korea beyond the parallel to within 75 miles of the Red capital of Pyongyang. They were northwest of Seoul in the Kumchon area.

Allies in East Fight Westward

At the east end of the line, South Korean troops which captured the port of Wonsan fought a mile westward to within less than 95 miles of Pyongyang.

Forces at all three points of the line reported stiff Red opposition.

The Reds had been expected to hold the Pyonggang-Kumwha-Chorwon triangle at any cost. Ever since the Reds were ousted from war-wrecked Seoul and driven across the thirty-eighth, reports had been received that they were concentrating forces at Chorwon.

Chorwon, 16 miles north of the thirty-eighth and 65 miles southwest of Wonsan, is the left base of the triangle. The right base is Kumwha, 20 miles north of the parallel and 62 miles almost due south of Wonsan. Pyonggang, the apex of the triangle, is 28 miles

Stalin Wishes Success For No. Korean Forces

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Moscow Radio said today Russian Premier Josef Stalin has sent a note to the North Koreans wishing them success in their struggle for "independence."

Stalin said:

"I wish the Korean people who are heroically defending the independence of their country the successful completion of their long years of struggle for establishment of a united independent democratic Korea."

Republicans Lead In Alaskan Voting For Legislature

JUNEAU, Alaska, Oct. 11 (AP).—Alaska swung toward the Republican side, on the basis of early returns today, in its "weather vane" legislative election.

It posed the question: Will it be true again that "as goes Alaska, so goes the Nation."

E. L. (Bob) Bartlett, the territory's Democratic nonvoting Delegate to Congress, who is seeking re-election, was running up a more than two to one margin over Almer Peterson, Anchorage Republican. In the 1948 election he had a nearly four to one final margin.

The Legislature is generally rated as more of a political weather vane than the office of Delegate because Bartlett's following crosses party lines.

In returns from three of the Territory's four judicial divisions, with only distant Nome still to be heard from, Republicans were leading for five out of six seats in the territorial Senate.

For the House of Representatives, Republicans were leading for 12 seats—Democrats for eight.

Crash of 'Boxcar' Kills 3, Injures 3 War Writers

TOKYO, Thursday, Oct. 12 (AP).—An Air Force "flying boxcar" crashed in a pre-dawn landing at a southern Japan air base today. Three American crewmen were killed. Five men were injured, including three news correspondents.

The Air Force said the three injured correspondents are:

Harold Faber, the New York Times, fractured left leg and burns of right leg; John Jefferson, Columbia Broadcasting System, injuries not listed; and John M. Colless, Reuters, the British news agency, badly shaken.

Bitterness Marks Ohio Senate Race

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11 (AP).—Some of the most bitter language in recent campaigns came from Ohio's senatorial candidates last night.

Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican seeking reelection to his third term, declared the CIO Political Action Committee which opposes him, is an organization whose "whole approach to the American political scene is a smear and a lie."

Joseph T. Ferguson, Democratic State auditor, who seeks Taft's office, accused Taft of using "every possible trick to hamstring" public welfare legislation.

Taft spoke at a meeting of the Republican Club at nearby Euclid. Ferguson spoke on a radio broadcast here.

Taft declared he did "not know whether or not the PAC is being guided by the Communists today," but added that "(Congressional) investigations, hearings, trials and public confessions have proven that the PAC was conceived in communism, had communistic midwives assisting at its birth and was carefully nurtured in its formative period by Communist teachers."

The Senator said the PAC which now backs Ferguson "has sought to create class consciousness among American people, breeding dissension and hatreds."

Ferguson said he favored governmental economy but that Taft "always gets economy minded when it comes to education for veterans, conservation for farmers, housing for families and such acts for the public good. It's always money on these matters."

Ferguson also criticized Taft for his stand on a bill which provided a means for servicemen to vote in 1944. He accused Taft of voting against the bill because the Senator "thought too many of our soldiers would be inclined to vote for their Commander-in-Chief, who was Franklin D. Roosevelt."

'Scoundrel'

Johnson Sued By Rosellini For Slander

Sen. Johnson Rossellini

ROME, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Roberto Rossellini, the Italian movie director who fathered Ingrid Bergman's second child, filed a slander suit today against United Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), charging "defamation of character."

The Senator, however, who once referred to Rossellini as a "bedroom prowler," left by plane for Paris before any summons could be served.

Rossellini's suit, filed with the Rome attorney general, was based on an alleged statement by Johnson in which he called the film director a "scoundrel."

Johnson allegedly made the statement Monday at the Excelsior Hotel after his arrival here with a group of touring newsmen.

Johnson previously had criticized Rossellini in speeches on the Senate floor in Washington.

On March 28, Johnson told the Senate that "when the guy is hopped up he is a pretty good salesman—this Nazi collaborator, this black-market operator, this associate of dope smugglers, this bedroom prowler."

Reliable sources said that Rossellini had been waiting until Johnson made remarks outside the Senate before filing suit.

Italian Good Producer Of Suits, Johnson Says

PARIS (Thursday), Oct. 12 (U.P.). United States Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), referring to a suit filed against him by Italian Film Director Roberto Rossellini, said today that Rossellini produced "more lawsuits than good pictures." Rossellini charged Johnson with "defamation of character."

Johnson, interviewed by phone at his hotel room at the George V Hotel, called the action "a typical Roberto Rossellini publicity stunt" and said:

"I'm sorry he waited until after I had left Italy before filing the suit. But it's nothing but a big joke anyway."

700 Tons of Powdered Eggs From Red China Stir Seattle

SEATTLE, Oct. 11 (AP).—A Seattle waterfront warehouse was jammed with powdered eggs from Communist China today. The 700 tons are awaiting transshipment to New York for distribution to eastern bakeries.

News stories about the Chinese eggs kicked up an immediate furore.

Representative Mitchell (D., Wash.) fired telegrams to President Truman and the Department of Agriculture asking an investigation in view of the present United States policy of buying up eggs to support parity prices.

The Packinghouse, Poultry and Egg Workers Union (AFL) called the egg shipments a "blow to American labor" and also prepared telegrams for the President and Agriculture Department, as well as the Washington State congressional delegation.

Tiny Part of U. S. Output

In Washington, an Agriculture Department official said about three million pounds of dried eggs were imported from China by commercial users during the first seven months of this year. That is less than one-fifth of 1 percent of the United States annual production of eggs.

The official told a reporter China has been the world's major exporter of dried eggs for many years. Present shipments to this country were described as largely a hangover from a time when the United States itself had no egg-drying facilities and depended on foreign supplies.

Latest figures show the Government itself now owns about 108,095,000 pounds of dried eggs, bought at 96 cents and $1.25 a pound under the price support system. Their total cost is placed at 115 million dollars.

The department official said it might be possible to bar the Chinese eggs from this country. But there is a delicate question, he said, about the advisability of such action at a time when the United States is anxious to keep the Chinese Communists from intervening in the Korean war in behalf of the Korean Reds.

The Chinese eggs are subject to an import tariff of 17 cents a pound. Officials said steps are being taken to raise this to 27 cents under terms of a trade treaty with Nationalist China. An increase in the duty would greatly reduce the price advantage now held by the Chinese eggs.

Chinese Undersell U. S.

A former egg man told the Post-Intelligencer that the Chinese eggs could undersell the American surplus variety in this country.

The Government has bought up 81,830,043 pounds of surplus United States eggs so far this year at 96 cents a pound for the powdered vaiety, the same price the Government would charge domestic users. For export the powdered United States eggs go for 20 cents a pound.

Alex M. Bryce, jr., of W. J. Byrnes & Co., the customs house brokers handling the Chinese eggs, said such shipments have been coming in "for 35 years" and that "there's nothing unusual about it." He refused to give the name of the New York consignee or to mention the price of the Chinese imports to buyers in this country.

The Post-Intelligencer said the eggs were first shipped to Vancouver, British Columbia, by trans-Pacific freighters, including at least one American cargo ship. The paper aso said another shipment is due this week.

Truman Sees Sister Honored

This is 2 hours earlier than was planned originally.

Press Secretary Ross told reporters at the Jefferson tonight Mr. Truman's party was scheduled to arrive at Hickam Field, Hawaii, at 8 a. m. Friday.

"Where do we go from there?" Ross was asked.

"That I can't say," Ross replied.

Rumors persisted that the scene of Mr. Truman's meeting with MacArthur would be Wake Island, a Pacific atoll that became famous in 1942 when the United States Marines under Maj. James Devereux made a valiant stand there against the Japanese.

Other places that have figured in the speculation are Midway and Guam. The battleship Missouri also has been mentioned as a possible meeting point.

An Army Constellation bearing Pentagon and State Department brass will take off from Washington at 2 p. m. Tuesday and join the Independence at Fairfield Air Force Base between Sacramento and San Francisco Thursday night. The journey over the Pacific will start from there.

President Truman and General MacArthur, according to a White House announcement Tuesday, are to talk about the "final phase" of the Korean war and other Far East problems — meaning, doubtless, Formosa and a Japanese peace treaty.

Mr. Truman was accompanied on the flight today by Secretary Ross, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughn, his Army aide; Gen. Wallace Graham, physician to the President; M. C. Wallgren, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, and Jack Romagna, presidential stenographer.

Wallgren, an old friend of the President, said "I'm going only as far as the West Coast."

The Army Constellation leaving Washington tomorrow afternoon will carry the following:

Mathew J. Connelly, secretary to the President; W. Averell Harriman, special assistant to the President; Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup, Gen. M'Arthur May Warn Of a New Red Blow

TCKYO, Oct. 11 (AP).—General MacArthur is expected to warn President Truman this weekend that the Communists will strike somewhere else in the great tinderbox that is Asia.

Informed opinion believes MacArthur will insist that the Reds can be headed off only by a powerful United Nations force.

CED Head Fears Controls Will Hamper Defense Drive

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Oct. 11 (AP).—Wage and price controls now would "impede the Nation's efforts to build up its military force" the executive director of the Committee for Economic Development says.

Wesley F. Rennie adds the United States probably can carry out its present military program "with little reduction in total, over-all civilian supplies."

He spoke last night at the thirty-fifth annual conference for leaders in vocational and practical arts education and guidance, sponsored by the State Education Department.

Rennie said the committee believed that controls "are not only unnecessary now, but would actually impede the Nation's efforts to build up its military force, prevent inflation and strengthen our economy."

Controls might be necessary, he said, if the military program were expanded beyond present plans.

(In New York Tuesday, Maury Nee, chairman of the Retail Planning Advisory Committee to Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, said a slack-off in retail sales in the past three weeks might make imposition of price controls unnecessary.

(Nee told a retail furniture group that many Administration officials were talking of setting up price and other controls for five years or more during partial mobilization.

("I hate to think of what would happen under strict controls in a five-year period," he said. "I believe controls may not be necessary if trade levels off, and I believe it has leveled off.")

134 Reported Sentenced For Slaughter of Jews

BUCHAREST, Romania, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—The Romanian press reported today that a Bucharest court sentenced 134 war criminals to hard-labor terms ranging from five years to life on charges of mass slaughter of Jews on Soviet territory during the war.

The indictments charged the defendants with "unheard of ferocity in shooting and drowning children, old people and women." It said all non-Jews considered "dangerous" also were killed.

Russian Signs Mark Airport at Wonsan

By Robert Bennyhoff

WONSAN, Korea, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—The ruins of 15 Soviet-built airplanes which were destroyed by the Communists before they fled were found at the Wonsan airport today.

Seven fighter planes which had been burned were in one underground hangar. Eight were in another. The Communists must have been saving them for a day when they hoped to use them, because they had been placed on wooden blocks, and their tires had been removed.

Many of the planes still had belts of 20-millimeter ammunition in their wings. The guns were lying underneath the planes.

In the wreckage of a hangar which had received several direct bomb hits at one end, there was a single-engined, two-place attack bomber. It was also intact, except for a hole punctured in its wings and fuselage by flying debris. There also were bullet holes, apparently received in aerial combat.

Most of the planes were two-place attack bombers, known to the Russians as IL-105. There were a few one-seated planes which probably were Yaks, but they were charred beyond recognition.

Some of the aircraft still had numbers on the tails. There were instruction and name plates in the cockpits and at various places on the fuselage. They were written in Russian. So were signs and building directions throughout the airfield.

South Korean troops meanwhile still were securing the newly captured port of Wonsan, a mile and a half from the airport. Enemy soldiers, including several women, were entrenched in positions atop a hill north of the city and there was intermittent fire fighting in the area.

Occasionally the Reds lobbed mortar and artillery shells into the city.

The South Koreans were mopping up the enemy speedily, despite the occasional whining of bullets and bursts of automatic weapons in the northern section of the city.

The fires which had been burning furiously Tuesday afternoon had died to smoking ashes and embers, but flames had destroyed a large part of the business district. Possibly 50 percent of the city had been wrecked.

One Flown Home

2 Area Men Wounded In Korea

Two more Washington Area men were wounded fighting in Korea, the Defense Department announced yesterday.

Lieut. Glasgow

First Lieut. William M. Glasgow, jr., son of retired Army Capt. W. M. Glasgow and Mrs. Glasgow, 728 S. Washington st., Alexandria, apparently was wounded in the Naktong River crossing. He wrote home three days before, saying he was fighting along the bank and expected to cross at any time.

Lieutenant Glasgow was flown here yesterday from Denver, Colo., and will be hospitalized at Bethesda Naval Hospital. He was in Denver one week after arriving by plane from Korea.

Born in Alexandria, Glasgow attended Alexandria high school and was graduated from Fishburne Military School, Waynesboro, Va., in 1944.

Sergt. George B. Himelright, son of Mrs. Ethel Himelright, 4913 Newton st., Newton Village, Bladensburg, Md., said in a letter that he was slightly wounded, but showed his family said, more concern for his mother's illness. She has paralysis of the throat and has not been told of her son's injuries.

Sergeant Himelright was wounded September 9 fighting with the Twenty-seventh Infantry Regiment. A native of Bladensburg, Md., he enlisted in the Army in 1947 when 17. He served in the Far East most of the time and was in Japan before going to Korea. He is now in a hospital in Japan.

Official casualty listings in the war yesterday rose to 24,163 Americans killed, wounded and missing in action. This was an increase of 3407 in a week.

The list gave 3614 dead, 16,289 wounded and 4260 missing.

Tibet Invasion Is Reported

CALCUTTA, India, Oct. 11 (AP).—A correspondent of the Indian newspaper Statesman reported from northern India today that Chinese Communists invaded Tibet across her eastern border and penetrated a distance of 50 miles against some opposition.

This report, from the correspondent in the Bengal town of Kamlingpong in the Himalaya mountains, said the Tibetans regarded the stab as a preliminary probe for a main effort to be developed as soon as the Chinese-Tibetan talks now going on in Peiping have collapsed.

(The Chinese Communist radio, in a cryptic reference to Tibet, said October 6 that "people's troops, cooperating with friendly multinational armies, . . . entered northern Tibet." However, at that time the Chinese Embassy in New Delhi and Tibetan sources there denied there was any invasion.

(With this new report, the same sources in New Delhi, former scene of the Chinese-Tibetan talks, said they doubted an invasion had begun.)

Ben Moreell Urges Boost in Steel Prices

PITTSBURGH, Oct 11 (AP).—President Ben Moreell of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp. today called for an upward revision of steel prices to bring them into line with the general economy. Moreell, who also is chairman of the J. & L. board, told a regional meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute:

"We must have adequate income to cover the cost of replacing our tools as they wear out or become obsolete and, also to pay cash dividends in amounts sufficient to attract investors to our industry.

"Only in this way can we expand to meet the growing needs of our economy. In short, we must have adequate prices for our products."

J. and L., the fourth largest steel producer in America, opened wage negotiations yesterday with the CIO United Steelworkers. The union seeks an undisclosed but "healthy and substantial wage increase." Many steel executives maintain wages of steel workers can not be increased without an accompanying increase in prices.

Moreell, the wartime commander of the Navy's Seabees, told the Iron and Steel Institute steel company earnings are "well below half those of the auto companies."

86 D. C. Men Are Inducted Into Army

Eighty-six Washington draftees were inducted into the Army yesterday, then sent to the Fort Meade reception center.

The draftees were taken into the services at a brief ceremony at the Army's induction center, Arlington Farms, Va. They were given a sendoff by 86-year-old William Hickey, sr., a veteran of the Philippine Insurrection, representing the Irish War Veterans, and Frank D. Norton, deputy director of District Selective Service.

In the contingent were three draftees who had failed to show up for preinduction exams, and were therefore sworn in immediately on passing the physical and mental tests. Eight others, who had failed to respond to an earlier call for the preinduction exams, also showed up yesterday but failed to pass the tests.

Altogether, 65 draftees who missed their preinduction call, were ordered to report for induction yesterday. The names of the 54 who failed to do so will be turned over to the District Attorney's office for possible prosecution.

Fairfax Delinquents Get Week to Report

Seven Fairfax County draft delinquents face prosecution if they do not report within a week, Fairfax County Selective Service Board No. 39 announced Tuesday.

The men have failed to respond to notices of questionnaires and physical examinations and the police have been unable to find them, Mrs. Irvine T. Chapman, clerk of the board, explained.

The delinquents are listed as: Joe Clinton Cloud, jr., latest address North Richland, Wash.; Raymond Eugene Coleman, Route 1, Alexandria; Avone Singletary, Route 3, Alexandria; William Alonzo Murray, Route 2, Alexandria; John Louis Murray of Fairfax, later of Frederick, Md.; Charles L. Smith, Route 3, Alexandria, and Charles Copeland, jr., Route 2, Alexandria.

Carrier Leyte Joins Fleet Off Korea

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Navy said today that the Essex class carrier Leyte has joined the task force operation off Korea's east coast, after speeding three quarters of the way around the world.

The 27,000-ton carrier completed its 18,513-mile voyage from Beirut, Lebanon, in less than 35 sailing days.

Hershey Urges Medical Men To Volunteer

The Selective Service System, which will register medical men on Monday, is "barking to scare them forward and hoping not to catch them," according to Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

The Selective Service director said last night: "We are hoping all the time that enough will volunteer before we issue any call, because as soon as they receive a notice for induction, they can't enlist."

If doctors, dentists or veterinaries are drafted, he said, they will spend several weeks training for something they aren't going to do anyway. Also, he said, there is the problem of taking them in regardless of dependents because the medical men are supposed to be officers.

General Hershey was speaking at a meeting of the International Association of Public Employment Services at the Federal Security Administraton Building.

The director said he feels the estimated three million men needed for the defense program could be maintained without drafting men older than 25. Going higher would increase the rate of deferments and rejections, he pointed out.

An advocate of universal military training, General Hershey said the proposal for six months' training and three years in the organized reserve would not carry the desired load of three million men under arms.

General Hershey says he does not believe in the present system of allowing youths to enlist at a lower age than the draft age. A large number of enlistments of 17-year-olds could mean that "we don't take some of those who should serve" in the draft-age brackets, he said.

Chinese Reds May Occupy N. Korea Strip

LONDON, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—Diplomatic quarters here said today Communist China may occupy a strip of North Korea on the Manchurian frontier to provide a seat for a refugee North Korean government.

Diplomatic sources said the reports probably were available to the United States and may be discussed by President Truman and General MacArthur at their mid-Pacific conference.

Any such move by China would furnish at least a token fulfillment of Premier Chou en-lai's October 1 pledge that Red China would "not stand aside" if the United States invaded North Korea.

They added it also would thrust upon the United Nations, and mainly the United States, the decision of extending the invasion of North Korea to any area occupied by the Chinese Communists.

French Finance Minister Here

American divisions which President Truman promised on September 9.

But the French are still miffed at Acheson for proposing the use of German manpower without having given them more than a few days' advance notice. They now complain that by raising the issue so suddenly Acheson dealt almost a death-blow to the Schuman plan for the pooling of French and German coal and steel industries. They contend the Germans will no longer be willing to join in the Schuman plan, since German steelmakers will be sure of capacity business from the coming rearmament program.

The Americans insist they still believe in the Schuman plan, do not want to put the Germans in a bargaining position, and have not the slightest intention of letting the Germans grow dangerous again.

The chief issue of the coming conferences, Moch said in his arrival in New York, would be the "financial question" involved in French rearmament. The recruiting, training and equipping of an estimated 20 French divisions will be a greater strain than the French budget can bear without American help.

Last month the Foreign Ministers decided the nature and amount of American help would have to be worked out in discussions among all the 20 nations concerned, rather than in bilateral negotiations. The 12-nation studies will require several months, probably with the help of economic experts borrowed from the Marshall Plan organization in Paris.

Meantime, the French and others will need small-scale help for immediate armament orders, and there will have to be quick agreement on the financing of the highest priority items.

Another subject requiring quick decision is American financial and military help for the hard-pressed French in Indo-China. Moch said on his arrival he was not unduly worried by the latest French defeats there, and thought France had enough troops to stop the Communist-led enemy forces.

But the French, under American prodding, are trying hard to build up a native Indo-Chinese army, so some of their own crack troops can be brought home for the defense of western Europe. This will involve weapons and money from here. Acheson promised last month he would consider specific French proposals, and Moch is expected to produce them at this week's meetings here.

Allies 12 Miles Inside No. Korea

north of the parallel and 50 miles southwest of Wonsan.

United States officers said the South Korean Sixth Division took the towns in almost blitzkreig fashion despite the bitter opposition.

United States officers doubted if the Reds had enough men and guns to check the march on Pyongyang.

Roads leading up from United States bases in South Korea were jammed with vehicles, guns, tanks and troops.

U. S. Eighth Army headquarters reported the right flank of the attack had rolled 2 miles north of Yuga, a village 10 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Alongside the American troops were soldiers from Britain and Australia.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead in the field quoted officers as saying there was only spotty resistance ahead as the U. S. Eighth Army went "on the move northward."

Reports to Eighth Army headquarters, however, described enemy resistance as strong on the main highway to Pyongyang.

On this front the Americans were fighting within 4 miles of Kumchon, the strategic road and rail center 11 miles north of the parallel.

All along the line the Americans were receiving the support of strong armored forces.

Far to the northeast, South Korean troops struck from the captured east coast port of Wonsan down the road to Pyongyang and promptly ran into stout resistance.

Eighth Army reports said the South Koreans moved a mile northwestward on the Pyongyang highway before running into heavy fire. Pyongyang lies 95 miles west of Wonsan, which in turn is 105 miles north of the parallel. The South Koreans completed the mop-up of Wonsan Wednesday.

Field reports from the front along the 38th Parallel were optimistic.

One officer even insisted he could "go all the way to Pyongyang" except for small pockets of enemy troops. These pockets were being methodically cleaned out.

Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, commanding the United States First Cavalry Division, declared there was no evidence of any reinforcement and the enemy was so spent he "cannot man a solid defense line."

But the advance was cautious to avoid losing lives "uselessly in these last days of the war," Gay said.

Aerial observers said groups of 50 to 200 Reds were seen retreating before armored columns of the United States First Cavalry Division and British and Australian units along parallel thirty-eight.

These forces were closing a pincers on the strategic road and rail center of Kumchon, 11 miles north of the thirty-eighth on the main road to Pyongyang.

The Reds fleeing before the advance were being pounded by Allied warplanes and artillery.

Gay told correspondents the Communists were "pulling out" to the north and west and added: "these cookies are beaten."

It is only a matter of time, he said, "until we are in Pyongyang."

While some Communists retreated before the Allied advance, others put up bitter resistance, apparently at the bidding of their commander-in-chief, Red Premier Kim Il Sung.

Kim told the 10 million people of North Korea in a broadcast Wednesday that they could not surrender, that "our motherland is now face to face with a grave crisis." He ordered the Red army "to fight until the day of victory."

His radio message obviously was his answer to General MacArthur's final surrender ultimatum to the Red army delivered last Sunday, but the Red leader didn't mention it.

Red refusal to accept MacArthur's surrender terms, Whitehead said, was bringing the devastation of war to North Korea.

"Village after village is burned to the ground, and the autumn-tinted countryside is being scarred and burned by battle," he wrote. "And this destruction will move northward like a plague as long as the Reds continue their resistance against United Nations forces."

The Reds are believed to have four regiments defending Kunchon in a desperate rear-guard action to stall the Eighth Amy's power drive northward.

But the defense appeared futile. Gay said his First Cavalry troopers could roll northward much faster but declared: "We won't bat our heads against strong points — we'll maneuver to find the soft spots. This won't be as fast but it will cost less in lives.

"Prosperity is just around the corner. The enemy cannot man a solid line of defense. There are soft spots and we'll find them."

Gay estimated the total Red force ahead of the First Cavalry at two divisions and remnants of "everything else." He said North Korean security units made up mostly of hastily recruited students "don't amount to much."

On the east coast, the South Korean Third and Capital Divisions at Wonsan sent patrols after Reds who were firing rifles and machine guns from high ground northwest of the city.

Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, commander of the United States Fifth Air Force, and Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, United States Eighth Army commander, flew to the newly captured Wonsan airfield Wednesday in a unarmed T-6 training plane.

Partridge said American fighters and bombers would be operating from the field "in a day or so." It will be the first air base for the Allies in North Korea.

MacArthur's intelligence officers said possibly three Red divisions were lurking in the mountains northwest of Wonsan, the northeastern end of the Red defense arc.

In the center of the arc, the officers said, the Reds had reassembled the North Korean Eighteenth, Ninth, Seventeenth and Nineteenth Divisions.

They were spaced along a 35-mile-long line between Hwachon and Yonchon, facing the South Korean Sixth and Eighth Divisions. The South Koreans on this front were from 5 to 20 miles or more inside North Korea.

Elements of the Nineteenth Division also were reported on the First Cavalry front 30 miles or more to the west.

The South Korean troops who captured Wonsan collected 5000 rifles, 500 submachine guns, 30 heavy machine guns, six tanks and four artillery pieces.

South Korean officers expressed surprise that the Reds did not make more use of the weapons and the circle of defenses ringing Wonsan.

American officers with the South Koreans in Wonsan said morale of Red units in that area appeared "incredibly low."

(A United States Defense Department spokesman in Washington warned that the fighting in Korea was "far from over" and predicted "plenty of fighting ahead.")

Despite the successes of United Nations forces, there seemed no possibility of a complete military decision in Korea before President Truman and General MacArthur meet somewhere in the Pacific during the coming weekend.

Observers in Tokyo expressed the opinion that the Korean picture would be only a part of their discussion.

Linked with it are questions arising from Indo-China, Formosa and the Orient in general.

Communist China's Ministry of Foreign Affairs reiterated Wednesday that the Chinese Reds would not "stand idly by" while U. N. troops advanced in North Korea.

While United Nations troops steadily rolled back the Red Korean defense line, Allied warplanes operated ahead of them, softening up targets, blasting supply convoys and striking at communications centers.

An American Air Force spokesman said Night Intruders over Pyongyang and eight other North Korean cities shot up four different convoys.

Allies Advance in Red Korea

Associated Press Wirephoto Map

TRIPLE DRIVE—Three Allied drives aimed at Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, made steady progress yesterday. An Allied pincers (1) was within four miles of Kumchon. South Koreans were near Yonchon (2) and captured Kumhwa and Chorwon to the southwest, and Pyongyang, northwest, two key towns in a Red defense triangle. On the east coast mopping up operations were completed in the port city of Wonsan (3) and the Allied drive in that sector headed westward towards Pyongyang

U. S. Pacific Aims Doomed, Red Navy Says

MOSCOW, Oct. 11 (AP).—Red Fleet, Soviet navy newspaper, said today the United States is attempting to transform the Pacific Ocean into an American lake but its plans are doomed to failure.

The editorial said a "national liberation movement" is growing in the East—in Vietnam, the Philippines, Indonesia and other countries.

The paper accused the United States of rapidly building up naval and air bases in Japan, saying there are already 10 immense United States air bases there. It said the Japanese oppose the bases but the United States will insist on them in any peace treaty.

The denunciation of American Pacific policies coincided with announcement President Truman will meet over the weekend with General MacArthur.

South Koreans Forced to Dig Own Graves

TOKYO, Oct. 11 (AP).—American intelligence officers said today Communist troops forced 49 South Koreans to dig graves and then shot and sabered them because they refused to fight against Americans.

Capt. Jack P. Lansford, Louisville, Ky., said 38 bodies were found in two mass graves. He related this story as told by Kim Mun Kwon, a wounded survivor.

The Reds rounded up 49 South Koreans between 17 and 35 on October 2 at Tongjong, 30 miles northeast of Seoul.

They jailed the men, then ordered them to join Red troops going out to fight against advancing Americans.

All refused.

That night the Reds took the prisoners in two groups into the hills. They forced the South Koreans to dig graves 15 feet deep.

Red submachineguns mowed down the prisoners.

The Communists searched bodies for valuables. Some wounded still were moaning. The Reds killed them with sabers.

Kim remained silent, although wounded.

The fate of 10 whose bodies were not found was unknown.

Japanese Ship Rice Daily to So. Koreans

PUSAN, Korea, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—The Japanese are shipping 375 tons of rice a day to the South Koreans to tide them over until their own crop can be harvested in mid-December, a United Nations spokesman said tonight.

The relief shipments from Japan will be replaced eventually by deliveries which have been promised by the Philippines and Thailand.

Brian Meredith, Ottawa, senior U. N. information officer in Korea said the sorely needed shipments are furnishing two million Koreans in the Seoul area with two handfuls of rice a day—about 1800 calories.

Siam's Advance Unit Passes Through Taipeh

TAIPEH, Formosa, Oct. 11 (U.P.). The advance unit of the Siamese expeditionary force to Korea passed through Taipeh today en route to Japan by plane.

Twelve officers and 21 non-commissioned officers, headed by Maj. Surakit Mayal-Arp, will join the Siamese liaison group already in Korea.

Eastland Assails Agriculture Dept. On Cotton Ruling

By the United Press

Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) yesterday accused the Agriculture Department of ordering a two-thirds cut in cotton exports "solely to break the price of raw cotton" for the benefit of textile mills.

He said the mills appear to "have gotten control of the Department of Agriculture and now dictate that agency's cotton policy."

The department ordered the reduction yesterday under authority of the new defense law to conserve dwindling United States supplies due to an unusually small crop this year and war-boom demands.

North Koreans' Firepower Held Exceeding Any in World War 2

TOKYO, Oct. 11 (AP).—Intelligence officers said today the North Korean army, cut to pieces in South Korea, had a greater firepower in terms of automatic weapons than any armed unit of any nation in World War II.

"They had enough firepower for a force three times their size by World War II standards," one intelligence officer said.

The following is only a partial list of equipment which fell into American hands. It represents only those weapons collected and counted by American officers attached to the U. S. Eighth Army.

It does not include equipment seized by the South Koreans, "because for the most part they took with them everything they captured," the Intelligence officer said. Neither does it include military booty seized by the Tenth Corps north of parallel 38.

This is the partial list:

82-mm. mortars, 211; 122-mm. mortars, 87; .50-caliber antitank guns, 235; 122-mm. artillery pieces, 1; 122-mm. howitzers, 15; 152-mm howitzers, 1 76-mm howitzers, 15; unclassified artillery pieces, 224; heavy carriage mounted machineguns, 853; heavy machineguns, 76; light machineguns, 220; sub-machineguns, 221; unclassified automatic weapons, 226; antiaircraft batteries, 8; tanks and self-propelled guns, 158; vehicles of all types, 549; railway equipment, 26 supply cars and four locomotives; ammunition of all types, 10 carloads.

Nearly all this equipment was Russian-made, Intelligence officers said.

Some of the equipment left behind by the North Koreans was so newly arrived that it was still packed in grease. Antitank weapons particularly fell into this category. The numbers of these guns indicated an increasing need for defense against the bigger American tanks which appeared later in the war.

Although there had been many reports that the biggest Russian tank—the Josef Stalin III, largest known in the world—had been seen in Korea, none was found, the Intelligence officers said.

They did discover "a very few" 57-mm. antitank guns of 1943 model. These weapons, presumably capable of stopping the most powerful armed tanks in existence, made their appearance very late in World War II.

The number of captured tanks and self-propelled guns was greater than expected. Despite relentless air patrolling of the highways, the North Koreans had succeeded in moving nearly 200 of these weapons near the front. Few of them got into action.

"There's enough war material in South Korea today to equip a tremendous force," an Intelligence officer said. "It's no wonder they gave us so much trouble."

Sex Violation Charged

Alexander T. Cashion, 64, a salesman, of 145 11th st. se., was arrested at his home yesterday and charged with sodomy on a 13-year-old boy. At the request of Clifford Alder, Cashion's attorney, the case was continued until November 22. Cashion was released in $2000 bond.

U. S. Okays Soviet Bid For Big 5 Peace Talk

sors are considering revisions that would meet several points raised by various speakers but would not take away any essential part.

Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Foreign Minister, who backed the seven-power plan in a strong speech today, told the committee earlier that the Russians should back up claims of peaceful intentions by actual peaceful deeds.

Carlos P. Romulo, Foreign Minister of the Philippines and former Assembly president, suggested a time limit on any Big Five negotiations so that the General Assembly could act if the major powers cannot get together.

Jacob Malik, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, told a reporter that the proposal for a big-power conference concerned a part of the U. N. Charter that had not been carried out and the Soviet Union thought it should be put into effect.

The Russians are invoking Article 106 of the U. N. Charter. This says that pending the coming into force of special agreements setting up the international police force under the Charter, the five great powers listed in the Charter shall "consult with one another and as occasion requires with other members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security."

The Russians do not regard the international force fighting in Korea as a U. N. army. They maintain it was created illegally by the Security Council while the Russians were absent and that it has no right to be in Korea.

One delegate pointed out the question of Communist China must be settled before a five-power talk can be held, since the Russians would insist that the Peiping regime enter the talks and the United States would stand on its contention that Nationalist China is the member of the U. N.

On the point of the international army and the military staff committee, there has been no progress since 1947, when the Russians and the other four disagreed on how this force should be set up. The Russians walked out of the military staff committee last January in protest against the presence of Nationalist China and have not come back in.

In the 1947 disagreement, the Russians proposed a force in which the various powers would make comparable contributions. That is, each country would put in a plane or a destroyer or a division of troops. If one country had no submarines, for instance, no submarines would be in the international force.

The American, British, French and Chinese disagreed. They said contributions should be on proportion of strength of each country.

That stalemate never has been resolved and some Americans protested there was an air of unreality in Vishinsky's calling for action in a committee stymied by his own representatives.

Elsewhere in the U. N., the newly organized commission on Korea postponed action on a resolution by Australia that would limit the authority of President Syngman Rhee, head of the U. N.-sponsored republic of South Korea, to the area below the thirty-eighth parallel. Some members said they wanted to obtain instructions from home.

Col. Alfred Katzin, personal representative of Trygve Lie in Korea, was reported to have told the commission that mopping up operations still are under way in South Korea and the time has not come for the commission to go to Korea.

Six New Polio Cases Increase 1950 Total in D. C. Area to 377

The number of polio cases in Greater Washington this year rose to 377 yesterday with the announcement of one new case in the District and five new cases in nearby counties.

The District total for 1950 reached 159 with the addition of a 7-month-old boy from the 200 block of Simms dr. se. The infant was admitted to Children's Hospital last Saturday. On this date a year ago, the District had recorded 83 polio cases.

Montgomery County reported three new cases, its total reaching 68. The latest victims are a 2-year-old boy from Beallsville, who had not been hospitalized; a 33-year-old woman from Boyds, who has been admitted to George Washington University Hospital, and a 5-year-old boy from the 800 block of Longley dr., Silver Spring, who has been admitted to Children's Hospital.

Unofficially, the Montgomery County total stood at 69. The Prince Georges County Health Department said one case included in its total has been transferred to the Montgomery County total.

The patient, a 3-year-old boy now at Children's Hospital, was at first thought to be from Beltsville, but, according to Prince Georges authorities, he is actually a resident of Montgomery. Prince Georges, which had no new cases, now reports a total of 62.

Arlington County reported one new case, a 14-year-old boy from the 1500 block of N. 17th st. Arlington's thirty-first case of the year, he is being treated at home.

The Fairfax County total went to 45 with the addition of a 4-year-old boy from the Cavalier Trail Subdivision of Falls Church. The boy was admitted to Children's Hospital Monday.

No new cases were reported in Alexandria which has had 11 polio cases this year.

3 Loudoun Polio Cases Hospitalized Here

Three young polio victims from Loudoun County, Va., were at Children's Hospital here yesterday, two of them in critical condition.

The critical cases are Thomas Teates, 11, of Waxpool, and Wilson Townsend, 7, whose home is near Leesburg. Both have bulbar polio, and the Teates child is in a respirator.

The third case is Leon Gibson, 7, of Round Hill, whose case is mild. The hospital reported him "much improved" yesterday.

This makes a total of 11 cases of polio in Loudoun County this year with two deaths.

Legion Votes to Outlaw Reds, Hears Stalin Called 'Coward'

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 11 (AP).—The American Legion convention today recommended a constitutional amendment outlawing the Communist Party.

The convention, fired by some high-keyed oratory, approved a resolution proposed by the Legion's Americanism commission that urged that all Communists who are American citizens should be interned and tried as traitors.

The commission, headed by Archie Closson of Lodi, Calif., also urged continued investigation of all Government personnel.

Two Republican Senators and a Congresswoman set the tone of the convention's biggest day.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) loosed a verbal broadside at Stalin, and Senators George W. Malone of Nevada and Karl Mundt of South Dakota, also Republicans, gave both barrels to the Truman Administration.

Calling Stalin "coward" and "murderer," Mrs. Rogers—receiving the Legion's distinguished service medal—gave a speech aimed at "Stalin and his Politburo."

"We will drive you from this earth," she promised.

Malone's special target was Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

"The handling of the Korean threat is but another instance proving the unfitness of Mr. Acheson for his high position," he said. "His administration has been wholly unsatisfactory. It is important that he be removed before other serious blunders are made."

Mundt also hit at "diplomatic blunders" and suggested:

"Perhaps we should have a West Point of diplomacy to train citizens in the conduct of international affairs with the same thoroughness and skill that our service academies now train our military leaders."

Mundt said he has wired President Truman asking him to appoint at least one citizen recommended by the Legion to the new subversives activities control board.

The convention also adopted a resolution denouncing the new housing credit controls for veterans.

It also announced plans to establish a home and school for underprivileged boys—the first of five "Boysvilles." No cite has been picked.

Other resolutions passed today favored:

Passage of Federal legislation allowing the death penalty for those convicted of espionage, sabotage or sedition in time of peace as well as war.

Continuance of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Removal from Government office of anyone under whom Communist activities have been allowed to operate

U. S. to Get Big Share Of Yugoslav Metals

BELGRADE, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—Marshal Tito's government concluded an agreement today with an American firm to furnish the United States with a major share of Yugoslavia's strategic nonferrous metals through 1951.

The deal effected between the Yugoslav government and Phillips Brothers Chemicals, Inc., of New York, calls for shipment of between 15 and 20 million dollars' worth of lead, copper, antimony, chrome and other metals.

L. Jesselson, treasurer of Phillips, which has been the chief American importer of Yugoslav metals since the Tito-Stalin break in 1948, said the Yugoslavs had resisted "a great temptation" to sell on the "gray" market.

The government's decision to continue major sales to America was believed linked with talks now under way between Washington and Belgrade concerning the possibility of more American credits to Yugoslavia.

Meanwhile, Yugoslavia and the United States, in another step toward friendship, agreed to the free exchange of government publications.

Soviet Fraud Charged in German Vote

FRANKFURT, Germany, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—The three Western allies accused Russia today of engineering a trumped-up election for the eastern zone of Germany next Sunday, and again challenged the Soviets to allow free balloting throughout the country.

The United States, British and French high commissioners outlined their views in identical letters to Gen. Vassily Chuikov, the Soviet commander-in-chief in Germany.

They said the Soviet-backed "single-list" elections cannot confer on the East German Communist regime "either legitimacy or any claim to represent the German people now living in East Germany."

Agreement Recalled

The Western leaders reminded Chuikov that the Soviet Union had agreed formally with the three Western allies that a democratic government should be set up in Germany and that the country should be unified.

They warned that Russia must "bear full responsibility" for obstructing these objectives of the Potsdam and other international agreements, to which Russia was a signatory.

The letters were signed by U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy, British Commissioner Sir Ivone Kirkpatrick and Andre Francois-Poncet, French high commissioner.

Berlin reports, meanwhile, said Soviet zone authorities started a sweeping program to combat underground activity or sabotage aimed to disrupt the scheduled elections.

Three Arrested

Erich Besser, a deputy in the state parliament of Saxony-Anhalt, was seized and taken away handcuffed on charges of showing an antidemocratic attitude." Eugen Potrabski, editor of the party organ Die Freiheit, and Erich Behnke, deputy chairman of the city of Halle, were arrested on the same charge.

West Berlin officials planned to stage an antielection demonstration at noon Thursday. Factory sirens in the allied sectors will sound with a wail expected to be heard deep into Soviet-occupied territory.

Soviet Zone Authorities Free 2 Photographers

BERLIN, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—Russian sector authorities released two Acme newspictures photographers today after holding them for 26 hours.

The two were Allyn Baum, 26, of Chicago, and his German assistant, Eberhard Tittle, 28 of Berlin.

They were seized yesterday when they attempted to photograph foxholes and machinegun emplacements dug by Communist-controlled East German police in the American sector bordering the Russian zone.

United States officials had made representations to Soviet sector authorities. Baum said he and his companion were fairly well treated.

Finnish Unions Reject Appeal to End Strikes

HELSINKI, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—The executive board of the Socialist-controlled Federation of Trade Unions today turned down Premier Urho Kekkonen's request to end the current 7-week strikes involving 107,000 Finnish workers as a preliminary to arbitrating a wage claims settlement.

The board, in a letter to the Premier, said it considered the government's proposal "impossible to comply with." The federation earlier had threatened a general strike unless "an acceptable solution" was reached before October 22.

Friends Society Group Visits Stepinac in Cell

BELGRADE, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—Four members of the British and American Friends Society tonight said they had visited Archbishop Alois Stepinac in his jail cell at Lepoglava Saturday.

Stepinac was sent there four years ago by the Yugoslav government, which gave him a 16-year sentence on charges of high treason. The delegation was the first to visit the Roman Catholic prelate since he was jailed in the autumn of 1946.

Harold Evans, Philadelphia attorney who was a member of the delegation, said he asked Stepinac if there was anything the Christian world could do to promote world peace.

"Nothing but prayer," Evans quoted the Archbishop as replying.

Others in the group were Evans' wife; William Edgerton, a Pennsylvania State University professor; and Colin Bell, a Briton who represents the Friends Society in Geneva.

Evans said the group was accompanied by the warden, an official of the Yugoslav "peace committee," and an interpreter, and that "under the circumstances, Stepinac had nothing much to say."

Evans said he had a room about 12 feet long by nine feet wide, with a smaller room fitted as a chapel for the Archbishop's exclusive use.

"He has a bookcase with books in his cell and he has a typewriter and also chairs and a table," Evans added.

He said that although Stepinac looked thin, he "seemed well."

Meanwhile a government official said reports that Yugoslavia might release him because of the urgent need for credits and food from America, have absolutely no foundation."

Red Mobsters Stab Austrian Town Leaders

DURNKRUT, Austria, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—Three town officials were in critical condition today from stab wounds inflicted by Communists who broke up a Socialist rally in this Soviet sector town.

They included the Mayor, Joseph Novak, Vice Mayor Franz Hering and Provincial Diet member Joseph Krainer. All are Socialists.

The rally was broken up when several hundred Communists arrived in Soviet army trucks from the Soviet-occupied Zistersdorf oil fields. Armed with knives and steel pipes, they fought about 500 Socialists for nearly two hours.

No regular police were available because Soviet officials ordered them to another town.

Chinese Reds Claim World Bank Rights

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Chinese Communist regime laid formal claim today to all Chinese property rights and interests in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

A Peiping broadcast heard here said the claim was made by Nan Han Chen, governor of the People's Bank of China, who said the assets "belong to the Chinese people and only the People's Bank of China as the state bank of China has the legal right to dispose of them."

French Brace For New Blow By Viet Minh

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 11 (AP).—Battered French troops on Indo-China's north frontier, braced themselves today for new onslaughts by reinforced Communist-led Viet Minh battalions.

Weakened by the rebels' greatest victory—the annihilation this week of the bulk of five and a half line battalions in a jungle trap northwest of Thatkhe—French border positions are buckling under new enemy pressure.

The success of the Moscow-backed Ho Chi Minh forces in the past two weeks have given the Viet Mnh almost unchallenged control of more than 200 miles of frontier area, with free access to Red Chinese supply sources and bases. This has shaken the entire military balance that had existed.

French attention is centered on the precariously held north Indo-Chinese post of Thatkhe. There is fear of another debacle along the bloodied Rolonial Route No. 4, scene of the latest French disaster, if the garrison is forced to retreat 35 miles southeast to the protection of the main frontier post at Langson.

The organization and equipment unveiled by the Viet Minh in the battle near Thatkhe shows plainly that Ho's North Indo-China force is no longer simply a guerilla army. The fight has become essentially a war between regular armies on a small scale.

[The United States today promised that arms will be delivered "as fast as possible" for Viet Namese and French forces, the United Press reported.

[Brig. Gen. Francis G. Brink of the United States military advisory group, who has conferred with high French officials and United States Minister Donald R. Heath almost constantly since his arrival last Tuesday, told reporters his mission was "definitely not tactical or political." "Simply here to see that goods get delivered and used for the purpose for which they were intended," the U. P. reported.]

Bao Dai Plans to End 3 Months on Riviera

PARIS, Oct. 11 (NYHT)—Emperor Bao Dai announced at Cannes tonight that he was returning to Indo-China at once because the renewed offensive of the pro-Communist rebels there was capable of "threatening international peace and security."

The Emporer's three-month stay on the Riviera has been a frequent target of newspaper criticism both here and in Indo-China.

Post-Purge Comeback

PRAGUE, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—The newspaper Lidove Noviny today said former Slovak Education Commissioner Laco Novomesky, who was purged last May because the Slovak Communist Party Congress found his "self criticism inadequate," has been named chairman of the Slovak academy of arts and sciences.

Present Rule In Fairfax Is Criticized

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Fairfax County's present form of government drew fire yesterday from a new organization which already has called for adoption of the county executive form in a public referendum November 7.

The Fairfax County League of Civic Organizations Favoring the County Executive Form turned from its attacks on proponents of a county manager administration long enough to brand the present government "unsuitable and inadequate" to meet existing needs.

While devoting most of its statement to criticisms of the present form of government, however, the league chided county manager advocates for their "erroneous" use of the term "executive secretary form" when referring to the existing government in the county. It urged voters not to be "misled" and warned against confusing the executive secretary system with the county executive plan advocated by the league.

Words Not on Ballot

"There is no such complete form of county government in Virginia," the statement said in reference to "executive secretary." It added, "in fact, the words executive secretary form do not appear at all on the ballot to be voted November 7."

It said the present form, providing for optional appointment of a county executive secretary by the board of supervisors, does not clothe the secretary with "adequate powers to perform the many tasks of administration facing our county today."

"We feel that the existing form is deficient, too, because under it 85 percent of the revenues of the county is not disbursed by the board of supervisors, but by boards appointed under the indirect method of selection by the Circuit Court," the statement said. "We feel that centralized purchasing for all the county departments which is prescribed under the county executive form would be more efficient than under our present system."

County Manager Statement

Meanwhile, an advocate of the county manager form asserted yesterday that "considerable courthouse speculation as to what Fairfax County citizen is being groomed to be county manager" indicates a "lack of understanding" of the manager's qualifications."

Omer Hirst, president of the Committee for Good Government, said the county needs as a county manager a "career public servant, not the minion of some political machine, and his qualifications must be viewed in that light."

To meet the qualifications, Hirst contended, the manager must come from outside of Fairfax County, "so that he will not be obligated to or connected with any clan, faction or party, and so that his loyalty will belong to all the people alike."

Declaring the county "desperately needs the efficient, responsible democratic government attainable under the county manager form," Hirst said: "It is indeed unfortunate that a small misguided group, without any justification whatever, persists in smearing this citizens' movement as a political conspiracy in which this or that county manager supporter is supposed to be seeking some selfish benefit for himself."

Arlingtonians Hear County Candidates

Amid charges and counter charges, three candidates for the Arlington County Board last night tried to curry some favor with members of the Parkway Citizens Association.

The charges, made by two seekers after the post, Fred W. Bach, Democrat, and Jacob Bachtel, independent Republican, were that nonpartisan incumbent Daniel A. Dugan, who seeks reelection, is a "high taxer."

The counter-charge, by Dugan, was that his opponents had not conducted "gentlemanly" campaigns.

The three spoke before a regular meeting of the association.

Dugan, who seeks his second term on the board, said county taxes may be reduced "to a degree" if the reassessment of county real property now under way equalizes county real values.

If the assessment produces an overall figure of 40 percent of the fair market value of county real estate he said, the county's tax rate might be reduced by 20 cents per $100 valuation.

Bach promised to "treat the tax dollar as a sacred trust" if elected to the board post.

Bechtel warned the county would be more than twenty million dollars in debt within five years if all bond issues now pending are approved.

Honored by Society of Natives

OUTGOING PRESIDENT—James C. Toomey (left), outgoing president of the Society of Natives, was honored last night at a testimonial dinner held by the society at the Fairfax Hotel. With Toomey are Hugh J. McGee, the incoming president (center), and Judge Alexander Holtzoff of the United States District Court, the guest speaker

District Crime Exaggerated, Says Holtzoff

"Lurid headlines" are creating the false impression that Washington is a crime-ridden city, Judge Alexander Holtzoff complained last night.

"I hope none of you take too much stock in these lurid headlines that try to pillory us," he told about 75 persons attending a testimonial dinner in the Fairfax Hotel in honor of James C. Toomey, outgoing president of the Society of Natives.

"I believe in frankness and candor," declared the District Court jurist. The majority of "these so-called aggravated assaults," he said are known as "cutting cases."

"They are confined to one element of the population . . . and are generally committed over a minor subject such as a pair of dice," he declared. He said he has frequently suggested that these cases be taken care of in police court and not handled as felonies.

The semi-annual crime report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation released Sunday indicated that on a basis of population Washington led 16 cities with populations of more than 500,000 in the number of aggravated assaults committed.

Calling the Metropolitan Police "probably the best and most efficient of any big city in the country," Judge Holtzoff said Washington is far above the national average in the percentage of murders solved, and is showing a decrease in crime while the national trend is upward.

He said there is a need for another institution for youthful offenders and a law providing for the registration of pistols but added: "While we must keep on working for improvement of our city, we must realize it is a pretty fine community as it is."

Other speakers inclued Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Hugh J. McGee, Toomey's successor as president of the society.

To Arts Board

Georgetown Building Plan Is Relayed

The District Department of Inspection yesterday sent the first building permit application to the National Fine Arts Commission for its review as required by the "Old Georgetown Act."

Passed by Congress on September 22, the act requires the commission to study and send its opinion to the District Commissioners on plans for new construction, or outside changes to buildings in Georgetown.

Stated purpose of the act is to preserve buildings of historic interest and examples of early American architecture. The commission's recommendations are not binding on the District Commissioners, however. And if the commission fails to report within 45 days, its approval is assumed.

Boundaries of the area are Rock Creek pkwy., White Haven st. nw., 35th st., Reservoir rd., Archbold pkwy. and the Potomac River.

Deputy Director of Inspection J. J. Ilgenfritz said the added step in processing permit applications will hold up small repair jobs for which permits were formerly issued over the counter. It won't slow up major projects. "We're 2 or 3 months behind on them anyhow," he said.

First application to go to the Fine Arts Commission was sought for general remodeling of a house owned by George Patten at 1504 33d st. nw., Ilgenfritz said.

Model Farm Visited In Land Week Event

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

JEFFERSON, Md., Oct. 11.—The Mrs. Nellie Thrasher farm was once more the mecca for farmers and other believers in soil conservation today.

Upwards of 1000 visitors—among them 350 school children from Frederick and Washington counties who came in their yellow buses to learn about modern farm management—turned out for the Thrasher Farm Day celebration of Maryland Land Week.

The Thrasher family took the affair in their stride. Since August 18, 1948 when 50,000 visitors tramped over the 175-acre farm, they have become accustomed to daily visitors. Even today more than 2 years after 550 workmen made the farm over from a run-of-the-mine place to a modern example of soil conservation in one day, as many as 35 to 40 persons visit the farm on a weekend. Scarcely a day passes without an auto load of tourists from far-away States stopping to see the newest methods of farming.

It has become in 2 short years a shrine that brings almost as many visitors as the Barbara Frietchie or Francis Scott Key home—the county's two most historical spots.

It was revealed today what the worldwide publicity her farm got 2 years ago, brought Mrs. Nellie Thrasher more than fame. A German farmer, who read about the 1-day miracle in a story put out by the State Department wrote her that he would like to correspond, with his ultimate objective an opportunity to manage her estate.

Another farmer in Maine wrote that he had a herd of cattle that he would like to merge with hers.

Several other correspondents indicated that they were interested not only in seeing her farm but in meeting her romantically. She has ignored them all.

Today's events at the farm were the joint venture of the Frederick and Washington Counties Land Week Committees, with County Agent Mark Miller of Washington and Henry Shoemaker of Frederick in charge. Ray Kincaid of the Federal Soil Conservation Service was general manager just as he was two years ago.

Saturday the farm will be visited by veterans from Anne Arundel and other southern Maryland counties who are taking Government - sponsored on-the-farm training.

Two exhibits at the farm today hogged the attention. One was a one-acre farm woodlot demonstration in the mountain woods at the back of the farm. There Joe Friscolm of the State Forestry Service demonstrated new methods of woodlot management.

The other was a one-man demonstration of fishing in a farm pond. A lone fisherman spent the day on the pond pulling in bass and blue gills every few minutes. The one-acre pond has been so successful that two other ponds have been stocked with its fish. Its example has resulted in 115 farm ponds being built in Frederick County in the last two years.

Thursday's main attractions in the Maryland Week program will be at Carroll County where drainage in a swampy area by dynamite will be demonstrated, and at Washington County where orchard soil conservation practices will be displayed.

For Doctors

Drop Race Bars, Urges MSV Chief

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

ROANOKE, Va., Oct. 11.—The new president of the Medical Society of Virginia recommended here today that county and State medical societies admit Negro physicians to membership in their organizations.

Such membership, said Dr. C. Lydon Harrell of Norfolk, would make them eligible for membership in the American Medical Association, and open up many privileges now denied the Negro doctor in practice and training.

"I feel they are justified in their ambitions and requests," added Dr. Harrell, declaring that "as a public health measure, we need more Negro physicians and we need to keep them better trained."

Dr. Harrell, internist and specialist in chest diseases, made his recommendations today after his installation as president of the MSV, in concluding session of the organization's 103d annual meeting, begun here Sunday. He succeeded Dr. Walter C. Caudill of Pearisburg.

On Sunday, the society's house of delegates failed by five votes to meet the two thirds vote requirement necessary to change the organization's constitution to admit Negro members.

On Monday a resolution to permit Negro physicians to attend scientific sessions whenever held at locations permitting the attendance of mixed racial groups was passed unanimously.

Dr. Harrell, in his inaugural address today, pointed out that there is nothing in the constitution or bylaws of the local medical groups to prevent Negro doctors from membership, and urged them to welcome Negro physicians.

He also reprimanded Virginia physicians for embarrassing their State society by delaying payment of their national dues, set last December for organized medicine's fight on compulsory health insurance. Less than 40 percent of the society's membership had paid the $25 annual fee by October 1, he reported.

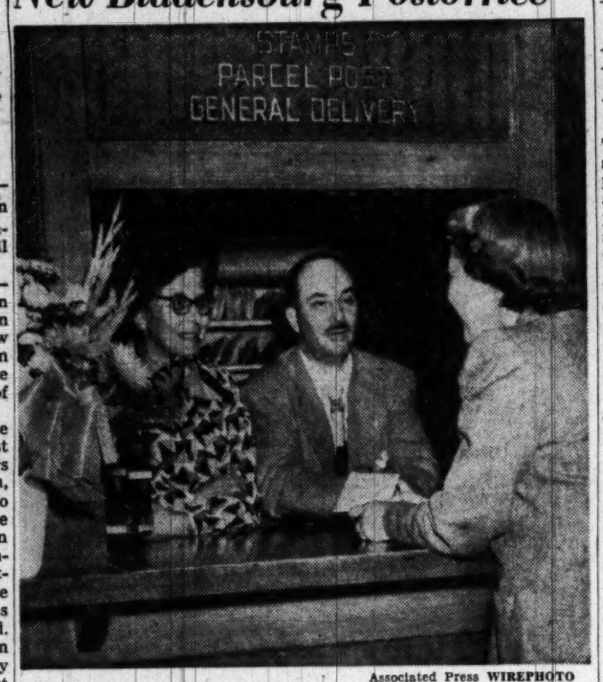
The new president also announced that the State society would survey or inspect tuberculosis conditions in Virginia's mental and penal institutions.

"We have reason to believe," Dr. Harrell said without elaborating further," that our tuberculosis patients in mental and penal institutions are not being properly handled to prevent a universal spread of the disease among inmates and personnel."

Expressing satisfaction over present successes in Congress, Dr. Harrell warned, however, of possible future attempts to destroy "our medical independence."

At this morning's scientific sessions the physicians were told that the common factor that makes the drugs acth and cortisone so beneficial in so many disease conditions still eludes medical researchers.

New Bladensburg Postoffice



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DEDICATION FRIDAY—The new Bladensburg, Md., Post Office at 4912 Annapolis rd. opened its doors for business yesterday morning. On hand to greet early arrivals were Postal Clerk Mrs. Evelyn E. Cederberg and Postmaster C. Howard Brown. Mrs. Sid Rosenthal was one of the first customers. Formal dedication of the new post office will take place Friday at 3 p. m.

C. & P. Turns Down Pay Bid

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday rejected —temporarily at least—a union request for a reopening of their work contract with a view of getting a "voluntary" pay raise.

However, C. & P. did leave the door open for further discussions. Asked what the company replied to the union request, a C. & P. spokesman commented: "We said 'no' today."

Following yesterday morning's meeting, J. R. B. Crigler, C. & P. general manager issued the following statement:

"Company representative met informally today with Division No. 36, CIO Communications Workers of America, representing plant, commercial, accounting and engineering employes, to listen to their reasons for requesting reopening of the wage provision of the existing contract.

"The present contract was negotiated just last May and runs for a period of a year. Many employes received increases at the time the wage agreement was reached. It provides further, as all our contracts do, for regularly scheduled increases in pay, generally at 3, 6, and 12-month intervals, which means that many more employes will continue to get increases throughout the life of the contract.

"The company's policy is to pay wages that compare favorably with those paid by other businesses in Washington for work requiring comparable knowledge, skill and capacity."

There was no comment from CWA Division 36, which represents around 3500 C. & P. employes. Division 50, CWA, which speaks for some 2700 operators, is also planning to ask C. & P. for a voluntary reopening of the wage contract and along with it, a wage boost.

Builders' Aid Asked in Camp Labor Dispute

The District AFL Building Trades Council plans to enlist the support of contractors in its campaign to ban nonunion mechanics and laborers from construction projects on nearby military installations, it was learned yesterday.

The council is drawing up a letter, to be circularized among 60 contractors employing union workers, warning the builders to avoid situations which might result in a dispute and possible work stoppage.

One suggestion contemplated by the council would be for the union-employing contractors to make their bids for military reservations construction contingent on their union craftsmen not having to work on the same installation with nonunion mechanics.

The idea behind this suggestion is to dissuade the contracting officers of the nearby installations from accepting bids proffered by non-union builders.

Another suggestion being considered by the AFL council is for the union-employing contractors to protect themselves in their bids from possible loss due to a work stoppage. Such a work stoppage, it was pointed out, might result if the members of any of the 20 AFL building crafts decided against working alongside non-union mechanics. AFL carpenters conducted this type of protest strike for ten days at Fort Belvoir, returning to work only last Tuesday.

The AFL building trade council campaign, stimulated by the awarding of two contracts to non-union contractors at Fort Belvoir, is aimed at getting a high-level Government policy decision on the issue. Right now, the lowest builder, whether or not he employs union labor, is awarded the job on military installations.

Cut in Aid to Greece Will Not Be Restored

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 11 (U.P.). Paul G. Hoffman, retiring chief of the Marshall Plan, said today the 67 million-dollar cut in Greek aid funds will not be restored even if the Greek government carries out the reforms recommended by the Economic Cooperation Administration

"There is no doubt of the ultimate success of Greek recovery," Hoffman told a news conference, "but the American people have a right not only to expect very good but superb efforts of Greece to help herself"

Wage Stabilizer

Cyrus Ching was the obvious—indeed almost the only possible—choice to head the new Wage Stabilization Board. If the President had listed the attributes of mind, character, experience and personality necessary to discharge this extraordinarily exacting job, he would have drawn an accurate picture of Mr. Ching. The fact is that this quiet, tolerant, powerful young man of 73, who was drafted into Government service three years ago from a distinguished career in private industry, has won a unique place and prestige among the leaders of business and labor alike. If it should become necessary for the Government to fix wage levels and intervene in collective bargaining negotiations as it did during the course of the last war, Mr. Ching is more likely than anybody else to make the regimentation seem fair and acceptable.

Moreover, he is likely to thrive upon, rather than wilt under, the rigors of the job. He seems to like Government service. Just the other day, indeed, he sprang to the defense of Federal workers and indulged in the iconoclasm that man for man they have "more competence" than the employes in private business. Of the commissioners of conciliation who have been working under him, he observed that most could make more money in industry but stay in Government nevertheless because they feel they "can contribute more to the good of the country by working for the Government." Mr. Ching himself is an outstanding exemplar of this attitude. In the present crisis, the country is immeasurably strengthened by this kind of devotion to the public service.

To The Death

North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung's exhortation to his troops to fight to the death is not necessarily an indication of what will happen. It was not to be expected that the Communists, with their disregard of human life, would accept General MacArthur's surrender demand. For some time it has been apparent that they were preparing to make a stiffer stand in the north, as evidenced both by the quick retreat of their troops and the long convoys coming in from Siberia and Manchuria. American and South Korean troops pushing north from the thirty-eighth parallel have run into tougher resistance, though they have encountered nothing approaching a last-ditch stand, as shown by the fact that the South Koreans have taken the port city of Wonsan well up the east coast.

Whatever additional organized fighting the North Koreans plan can at best be a delaying action, and Mr. Kim must know it. United Nations forces have already demonstrated their ability to roll back the aggressors to the North Korean capital. And it is becoming increasingly probable that the North Korean and Russian tactic will be not to engage in formal battles, but to make the United Nations advance as costly as possible. In other words, their objective will be to pin down U. N. troops. Guerilla warfare from the hills, at which the Communists are past masters, is well suited to this purpose.

Indeed, the continuation of guerilla warfare is about the only satisfaction Moscow can obtain from its Korean adventure. Russia lost her chance to make the aggression successful at the time of the battle to hold Pusan. It is unlikely that Russia, having steered clear of general war through direct commitment of her forces, will choose to intervene militarily now—though American units must scrupulously avoid border violations that might goad her—or that she can persuade Communist China to intervene. Russia could, of course, save some measure of face by pulling the rug out from under the North Koreans—as she has done in the past at the expense of both the French and German Communist Parties—and by joining in a U. N. peace move. But as yet she shows no disposition to do this, preferring at little expense to herself to encourage continued guerilla warfare, so as to exact more lives out of the antiaggression forces.

For this reason it is imperative now to broaden the base of the United Nations forces in Korea for the post-battle phase. Too much of America's defense force is committed in Korea. Our men are needed elsewhere, for the defense of Europe and to serve as insurance against any new fires the Kremlin may be thinking of starting. Now is the time for the many countries which have made vague offers to support and could easily afford to send troops to make good on their promise. If the new prestige the United Nations has gained by its action against aggression is to mean anything, the crying need is for its members to meet their obligations with a composite occupation and police force to take over in Korea.

Immigration Farce

The immigration authorities have no choice but to play the farce of the McCarran Act as though it were serious drama. Ellis Island, a depot in New York's harbor close by the once symbolic Statue of Liberty, is now crowded with aliens who are required by the new law to be detained there if there is any suspicion that they hold, or have ever held, membership in or affiliation with any totalitarian organization. Manifestly this law cannot be enforced without making the United States look ridiculous. The application of it in the past few days to the young Austrian pianist, Friedrich Gulda, and to a number of Italian singers of the Metropolitan Opera Company has already had this unhappy result.

But Senator Ferguson, who bears a large measure of responsibility for getting the law enacted, now comes forward with an assertion that the Truman Administration is seeking to undermine it by attempting to enforce it. This is little less than an advocacy of anarchism for which the Senator, if he were an alien, would be subject to exclusion from the United States under the very act he sponsored. The McCarran Act vests no discretion whatever in the immigration authorities. It explicitly commands the exclusion of "aliens who, at any time, shall be or shall have been members of . . . the Communist or other totalitarian party of any State of the United States, of any foreign state, or of any political or geographical subdivision of any foreign state." To suggest that executive officials ignore this clear command of Congress simply because they recognize its absurdity is to suggest that we cease to live under a government of laws. Friedrich Gulda was, for a brief period when he was 10 years old, a member of the Hitler Youth, indubitably a totalitarian organization. Therefore he is inadmissible under the terms of the McCarran Act.

It is true, as Senator Ferguson points out, that the law authorizes the Attorney General temporarily to admit aliens inadmissible under the law if he is convinced that this will not endanger the public safety. But the Attorney General is then required to make a full report to Congress in each instance justifying his action. The burden is an impossible one; and it cannot, in any case, prevent the absurdities of detention at Ellis Island. Mr. McGrath has chosen to run the risk of letting the formidable young Mr. Gulda step upon American soil long enough to fill a single concert engagement. He even stretched his authority enough to allow Arturo Toscanini to come back to this country, which is his place of residence, with no more than a cursory examination. But if he does not watch his step he will certainly find himself accused one of these days of default of duty—quite possibly by Senator Ferguson.

As long as this piece of panic legislation remains on the statute books, it will subject the United States to the laughter and the contempt of the civilized world. It drops, and was intended by its authors to drop, an asbestos curtain against supposedly inflammatory ideas around this country's ports of entry. It will require an examination of the present and past political beliefs of all sorts of nonpolitical persons—artists, businessmen, tourists—who are not in the most remote sense dangerous to the security of the United States. There is no way to make it rational by administrative regulations. Only Congress can correct this fiasco for which it is responsible.

Housing Credit

The just announced restrictions on home mortgages applicable to loans made or insured by Federal agencies and to noninsured private mortgage credits serve the dual purpose of reducing the drain on scarce materials and manpower needed for defense purposes and arresting further inflationary advances in the cost of housing. The aim is to cut down the volume of new residential construction now running at an annual rate of 1.3 million units to about 800,000 or 850,000 starts by next year. As Administrator Foley of the Housing and Home Finance Agency notes, without corrective action unlimited competition for materials and services would lead to further price increases and only those purchasers who are able and willing to pay these inflated prices could buy.

Government-aided financing has heretofore been designed to stimulate home building, and even under the more restricted regulations regarding insured loans for lower-priced structures, terms are extremely liberal. In case of veterans, moreover, down payment requirements are lower at all price levels than on other loans and for all persons purchasing homes in the lower price brackets the percentage of down payments is lower than for higher priced structures, while a longer period for repayment is also permitted.

This type of selective credit control insofar as it applies to so-called conventional credits—that is, private mortgage credit not protected by Government insurance—is an innovation made possible by passage of the Defense Production Act. In case of private credits, for whose administration the Federal Reserve Board is responsible, the new regulations apply only to financing on which construction started after August 3—a most unwise restriction that may result in raising prices of existing homes. However, the tightening of credit controls will undoubtedly have a far-reaching effect on the construction industry, especially as it is expected that controls will soon be extended to cover rental housing and nonresidential construction.

Although these curbs on mortgage credits are regarded as emergency devices, like the reimposition of controls over consumer credit, we believe that they are a form of credit restriction that should be retained for possible use in future emergencies. For, whether the Nation is at peace or involved in wars, the orthodox methods of restraining credit expansion do not provide effective means of preventing an unsound or excessive expansion of credit in particular fields. As a matter of fact, the rapid expansion of consumer and mortgage credit had become alarming before the outbreak of the war in Korea and has been a prime factor in raising prices of durable consumer goods and building materials.

Air Command

Both the major reshuffles in the Air Force top command bring men of balance into significant new posts. Lieut. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, who has been named vice chief of staff and will receive his fourth star, is something of an elder statesman in the Air Force despite his relative youth. He has had unusually rounded command experience and knows the tactical support as well as the strategic side of the Air Force job. As commander of the Thirteenth Air Force and tactical air commander in the Solomon Islands campaign, he saw some of the roughest fighting in the Pacific when air support was most vital; later he served in Europe as commander of the Fifteenth Air Force. He is well liked, and his appointment should please the other services with which he must work.

Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, who is being shifted to command the United States Air Forces in Europe, is known not only as the youngest top general but also as probably the most brilliant planner in the Air Force. He has been acting as vice chief of staff since the death of Gen. Muir S. Fairchild, and he is certainly one of the most promising candidates for future leadership of the Air Force. But he has been clamoring for more command experience, and his new assignment will help increase his qualifications. More than that, the appointment of so able a general to the command in Europe should reassure the people there that they have not been abandoned by the intercontinental bombing zealots and that the United States means what it says about making western Europe the first line of defense.

Judicial Discretion

Much of the criticism that is being directed at the Supreme Court because of its action regarding the Oklahoma restricted covenants and Glen Taylor cases seems to be based on a misunderstanding of what the court does when it denies a petition for certiorari. Too often such action is interpreted as placing the stamp of judicial approval upon a lower court's decision. The court has occasionally pointed out, as Justice Frankfurter did again on Monday, that when it refuses to take a case it makes no decision as to the merits of the legal questions involved. That, of course, should be obvious. Some confusion is doubtless unavoidable when the court declines to review lower court decisions that seem to be at variance with the principles it has laid down in other cases, but this certainly does not warrant the assumption that the court is wobbling from one position to another.

In the Oklahoma City case the court declined to pass upon a decision of the State Court setting aside a sale of property to Negroes by white persons who had entered into a restrictive covenant not to make such a sale. The State Court decision appears to be at variance with the Supreme Court's ruling in the restrictive covenants cases decided in 1948. But the lower Federal Courts had refused to take the Oklahoma City case because the constitutional issue had not been raised when the case was in the State Courts. This would also be ample ground for the Supreme Court to reject the petition for review. Or it might have found that the record in the case was cloudy. Since the court seldom states its reasons for rejecting certiorari cases, all we know is that it did not regard the case as a proper vehicle for further clarification of the law.

In refusing to consider the conviction of Senator Taylor for disorderly conduct the justices could have taken the view that no Federal issue was raised. To be sure, the conviction grew out of a scuffle resulting from Senator Taylor's attempt to pass through the Negro entrance to a Birmingham church. But judges are capable of deciding that disorderly conduct is disorderly conduct regardless of what cause the person creating the disturbance may be trying to promote. Or the case may have been rejected because of some technical defect. The important thing to remember is that the Supreme Court does not attempt to pass upon every case in which a litigant feels that an injustice has been done. It could not possibly do so. Rather, its function is clear statement of the law in cases involving important Federal questions. If a particular case coming up on certiorari does not lend itself to clarification of the law, the court is at liberty to reject it. We can see nothing more in the rejections announced this week than a judicious exercise of this right.

Science Deferments

I think there is a great deal in what General Hershey has to say about the deferment of scientists and technicians from military service. They are greatly needed for the modern war they made, but should be deferred no more than others, who know how bad it is. Whatever his critics may say, our democracy has again turned up a man who knows his part in helping save it.

Welfare State

Private enterprise and individual initiative under our American system of government are subject to legislative regulations and the pressure of public opinion whenever they attempt to monopolize business and nullify and frustrate competition. But in a welfare state under control of Government bureaucrats all business is placed under a political monopoly absolute in power which can only be broken by a revolution of the people.

All history testifies to the solemn fact that every revolution of the past was started by the people who were oppressed by government dictators and bureaucrats who could not be dislodged by peaceful legislative measures, or by the pressure of public opinion. The people will patiently endure a certain amount of oppression, and the curtailment of their fundamental rights and liberties when the government faces a crisis and a national emergency, in order to weather the tempest successfully. But when the leaders in government exercise arbitrary authority in depriving the people of their liberties and lay unbearable burdens upon their shoulders in peacetime, and seek to prolong war measures as permanent government policies and practice totalitarian tactics of government, the people as a general rule arise in revolt against the absolute exercise of a political monopoly that can be ousted only by forceful means and measures.

Let the American people heed the wise counsel of Benjamin Franklin who said: "They that give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety."

Pakhtunistan

A news dispatch recently received by the press here from Pakistani sources, falsely asserted that Afghan troops invaded Pakistan territory.

We state officially that this allegation is absolutely without foundation. No Afghan troops have taken part in any action against Pakistan. It is the people of Pakhtunistan who have been driven into taking some measures for their own protection in their own territory. The incident is a result of the aggressive action of Pakistan against the Pakhtuns by bombing the Pakhtun territory as a result of which men, women and children were killed three weeks ago.

The gravity of the situation was brought to the attention of the peace loving peoples of the world by the Pakhtuns who demand their legitimate right of independence in their fatherland—Pakhtunistan.

Evicted Dogs

In reading recent articles concerning "dog owners" who are being evicted unless they dispose of their pets, I am distressed to think that such a situation exists.

I live in a residential section, Huntington Terrace, and formerly lived in Cameron Valley. I am very sympathetic toward the citizens of Cameron Valley and other housing projects who have provided for their pets, become fond of them, later to be ordered to dispose of them. Some dogs which have been cared for would grieve themselves to death if separated from their masters. Can't something be done to protect these animals? So long as citizens take care of their pets, why must they be deprived of owning and loving a dog?

DSC In Korea

According to an Associated Press dispatch of October 8, the only Distinguished Service Cross awarded by the Air Force in the Korean war, has been given to Maj. Gen. Earl E. Partridge, commanding general of the Fifth Air Force for "daring reconnaissance flights behind enemy lines in unarmed planes."

I wonder if this decoration—normally awarded for "conspicuous gallantry in action above and beyond the call of duty" and ranked only by the Congressional Medal of Honor—was awarded to all personnel who made reconnaissance flights in unarmed planes behind enemy lines—or just the major generals. Constitution's Meaning

I have just completed rereading the Constitution and its amendments. It is not long and I believe that at this time, when national elections are imminent, all citizens should read and study this basic document. When one is confused by the trivia in everyday affairs, it is wise to sit down and revalue things in the light of basic truths and principles.

I wonder how many people in this country have recently read the Constitution. Of those people who have read it, how many understood it and appreciated the background of its origin? How many of our public officials, when they took the oath of office, swearing to support this document, had recently read and understood its full meaning?

One of the greatest services the journalistic profession of this country can perform is to educate the people on the background and meanings of this fundamental document now. If each citizen of this country of ours has a working knowledge of our Constiution, he will be better able to evaluate the controversial political issues of the day and thus express himself more intelligently.

"Gook" Origin

The Koreans claim a civilization over 4500 years old. Their word for foreigner is "gook." I translate, "I am an American" in Korean, "NAH-noon MEE-gook sah RAHM-ee-yaw." The word for American is "MEE-gook." So, when the ancients pointed to an American foreigner, they would say (short form) "MEE-gook." Hence we agreed — not knowing that the "MEE" applied to the American. B. K.

Asian Federation For Korean Peace

Now that the first phase of the Korean struggle is over we face the problem of peace. What is to be done so that Korea can be unified and made into a democracy that will stand some chance of survival in an Asia dominated by communism?

No official pronouncement on the peace has yet been made. Nevertheless, the shape of what is being planned is already beginning to appear. All the talk now is for unifying Korea, holding elections and then getting out—the sooner the better. In fact, our top level diplomats want out of Korea so badly that we have asked that the U. N. turn over the job of occupation to some other nation, preferably Asiatic.

It must be plain to even the most casual observer that this war will be a long time dying. All reports indicate that the Korean Reds intend to continue fighting guerilla style and that the Chinese Communist government will give them support.

The confused period of struggle that lies ahead will almost certainly require large occupation forces for a long time to come. We cannot expect the newly established Korean government to handle this underground struggle in the mountains, the villages and the back alleys by itself.

And what U. N. nation can one suggest to take the job of occupation off our hands? India? India does not even want North Korea invaded, and at this writing, she refuses to even sit on the newly formed U. N. Commission on Korea. France is so busy dealing with the Viet Nam in Indo-China that she was unable to send even a corporal's guard to Korea in the recent fighting. Britain too has her troops spread thin and it is extremely doubtful that she would accept the job or handle it properly if she did.

My own view is that unless we are prepared to write Korea off as just a noble gesture, we shall have to occupy and police it for as long as is necessary—and that may be for a long time. Korea, after all, is just a tiny peninsula jutting out from a huge and predominantly Communist mainland. Her chances of surviving as a democracy without outside help would be on a par with those of a pygmy standing off a stampeding elephant with a bow and arrow.

A look at the political map of Asia shows that the mainland is Communist. The rimland, however, is non-Communist, although under heavy pressure. That rimland consists of Japan, Formosa, the Philippines, the East Indies, Malaya, Indo-China, Siam, Burma and India. What if, with American help, these or part of these nations formed some sort of Asiatic Federation for the purpose of mutual defense and trade? With American help and guidance the member nations of such a union would develop firmer and more progressive governments. At the same time, with United States training and equipment, such a federation could develop a well-trained and effective defense force that could easily cope with guerilla fighters and perhaps even with a full-scale Communist attack. The chances are, however, that such an attack would never be launched because there would then exist a capable "situation of democratic strength" in Asia.

Nor would the advantages from an Asiatic Federation be only military. Asia is thirsting for economic rehabilitation—she needs the kind of help and guidance that only America is equipped to give. American technical help, advisory and study missions, equipment and money for the development of electric power and industry and better farming would melt the poverty of Asia like snow under a hot sun. And what better propaganda for peace could we ask than a steadily rising standard of living in the most depressed area on earth?

Training For 'Panty-Waists'

By Malvina Lindsay

How Toughen Youth?

YOU SEE them at railway stations, on trains, trucks, at drug stores, these slender, khaki-clad youths, with fresh, unlived-in faces, that Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Army's field forces, has promised to train into "the toughest soldiers America has ever produced."

You wonder what a flashback of each boy's past would reveal. What kind of home, parents, school, neighborhood lie behind him? How well is he prepared to take this necessary toughening—and whatever else is ahead?

No, we can't send "panty-waists" to fight crude, ruthless, primitive foes who scorn all rules of warfare. Nor can we put them in occupation armies to be softened and corrupted by conquerors' lives. American youth has to be toughened, children coming on have to be toughened for these dangerous times. But just how?

To the old spit-and-polish disciplinarian the answer is easy. Some of it is unprintable. In brief, his program would be a vehement, abrupt reversal of "Mom stuff." Yet something more than such reversion to authoritarianism is needed.

You think of the widespread charges that these millions of boys going into the Army have been softened and over-protected in the home; that spoiled by a boom economy they have tended in civilian jobs to be sloppy and irresponsible; that in college and out of it they have looked to the future in terms of safe jobs and pensions.

YOU THINK also of the great concern parents of today have in the psychological rearing of children; of the thousands of parents' groups studying how children can be given more stability, security, above all more love. Yes, love has been the watchword of the last few years in child rearing. And now . . .

Are we then to throw overboard our ideas of how to develop civilized human beings? Start training Spartans? Or arrogant goose-steppers? No, that would be defeating the very thing we are arming to defend—the freedom and dignity of the human being. Surely there is some way to be strong, yet not brutish.

You think of the Fort Knox experiment in training the new soldier of democracy; of the faith in it of officers who have watched its workings; of what Gen. John M. Devine, who set it up, said of the discipline of fear, that it is "valid only until it meets a greater fear," and that the fighting man of today needs a "higher discipline."

You think also of the educators and psychologists who say that the truly strong are only those who are self-disciplined. And you think back through history of the barbaric hordes and the outwardly tough legions who conquered, then fell through their own weaknesses.

Well, probably the Army is getting some spoiled young men brought up on the cult that Junior must never be frustrated. It's probably getting a lot more who are soft and undisciplined because of parents' ignorance, immaturity, neglect. But it's also getting many from homes in which parents have tried faithfully by modern child-rearing concepts to make their sons self-reliant, responsible and adaptable to a world in flux.

YES, IT'S going to be hard on these boys coming out of a pleasant civilian life to be toughened into warriors under the quickened, arduous routine that the times demand; to come up within six weeks against a battle indoctrination only a little less terrifying than the real thing.

You think of how tragically short the time is also for toughening their minds—though General Clark says this also must be done. And you know that a faith in what one is standing for not only lightens fear, but as Raymond B. Fosdick said recently gives a "therapeutic reaction, a lift to the human spirit."

Yet the Army is under terrific pressure of time in giving men this inner armor, and the "higher discipline" to which its leaders aspire. Parents and teachers will have to do more to prepare youth for these training camps to which it is now being fed.

You think of a recent discussion by educators on the new demands an armed camp world is making in child-rearing. We had slipped a little, some of them thought, in making youth realize its responsibility to treasure, defend and develop its great inheritance from civilization.

You wonder how many of these boys coming into camps have any thought of how long and hard men have struggled and fought to attain the free and comfortable life they have left behind. You wonder how many of them have any kind of faith, religious, political, philosophical to sustain them? How many have been trained in habits of cooperation, adaptability that will make this rugged life more bearable? How many have been loved unselfishly and intelligently enough by their parents that they can march to this new uncertain, demanding adventure as men, not children?

Federal Pay Raise

Noting an article in the Jerry Klutz column of October 2 stating that a bill is being advocated in Congress asking for a study of living costs to prepare U. S. raise for Federal employes, may I ask, as a retired Government employe of nearly 30 years of service, that your page take up this matter and that all employes, Federal, District and annuitants, who equally feel this high cost of living, be included?

Britain And Asia

By Marquis Childs

Empire To Partnership

LONDON—Not so many years ago this capital was the focus of the greatest imperium of modern times. The boast about the sun never setting on the British Empire was truthful as well as proud.

Childs

In the interval since that empire vanished—except for stray bits and pieces in various corners of the globe—a remarkable transition has taken place. By conscious, careful, skillful policy the British have been changing over from imperial master to friendly partner.

They are frankly amazed at the success they have had thus far in this quick-change act. After performing as the high-handed British Raj for a great many years, they would not have been surprised at being shoved out once and for all with the door permanently closed against any kind of relationship.

The instrument of change is that international club known as the British Commonwealth. It is hardly necessary to add that the old rules of exclusion coming out of the century of empire have long since been junked.

There has just been concluded here a Commonwealth Conference—operating under the new rules—on Southeast Asia. While the test of performance is still to come, on the score of agreed objectives and plans for the future, it seems to have been highly successful.

As the tensions in Asia build up, there seems little hope of any kind of peace whether short term or long term. But if there is a ray of hope left, it is in the patient, painstaking approach to real cooperation seen here.

AROUND the conference table were representatives of India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Australia, New Zealand and Britain, with other commonwealth countries participating from time to time. They drew up a prospectus for the development of the great underdeveloped areas of Southeast Asia. And at a later session this program was taken up with representatives of Burma, Indonesia and other Asian countries not part of the commonwealth.

The prospectus includes a technical assistance bureau to furnish technological aid. It includes a careful scheduling of repayments on the sterling debt that Britain ran up in these countries during World War II. And it contains at least the tentative outline of a program of capital investment, with emphasis on developmental loans from the International Bank.

Some of the steps will be carried out at once. This represents practical progress toward East-West understanding and eventual partnership.

While they are discreet in talking about it, the British planning this cooperative policy are hopeful that American efforts in behalf of Southeast Asia can become a part of the whole program. Assistant Secretary of State George McGee was an unofficial observer at the Commonwealth Conference. Capital investment, whether public or private, must come in considerable part from the only great pool of surplus capital—and that is in the United States.

POLICY planners here have borne in mind the warning given by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India three years ago. At a conference on commonwealth relations in the new and empireless world, Nehru in effect said:

"You can fight communism in Asia, but you can't fight both communism and nationalism. If you try to fight nationalism, you will be driven out of Asia."

In other words, to resist the national aspirations of people who have lived long under colonialism would be a fatal error. In part, at least, this is behind Nehru's attitude on China. He believes that the Chinese Communists, given a moderate policy in the West, will develop independence of the Soviet Union even though their economy and government may be Communist. That is to say, they would follow the example of Yugoslavia.

A lot of the credit for the success of the recent conference and the new approach to new Asian states goes to two exceptionally able younger men in the Labor government. Patrick Gordon-Walker, Minister of Commonwealth Relations, and Hugh Gaitskell, Minister of Economics, have nursed the whole project along with care and understanding. Gaitskell, who was chairman at most of the sessions, is sitting in as Chancellor of the Exchequer in the absence of Sir Stafford Cripps and he may take the job permanently if Cripps' ill health forces him to retire.

As with President Truman's Point IV program, this is a signpost to a decent and a peaceful world. And that remains true even though it appears sometimes as though all signs pointing to reason and moderation will be ignored.

Puzzled Home Buyers Told Effect of New Credit Curbs

Government housing offices were flooded yesterday with questions about the complicated new home mortgage curbs. Here are some of the questions asked, with answers.

Q. What type of housing is affected?

A. Only one and two family houses. Apartments and commercial property are exempt, but probably not for long.

Q. Does the purchase of a new house with FHA or VA financial assistance come under the new rules.

A. Even if you bought a new home with private financing you are hit by the stiffer down payments and shorter pay-up periods.

Q. How about buying an old house?

A. The new curbs will apply only if you are purchasing the house with Government-guaranteed loans.

Q. What is the definition of a "new" house?

A. Anything built or started after August 3, 1950.

Q. Do the regulations give any special break to veterans?

A. Yes. They get about a 10 percentage point advantage on down-payment requirements.

Under the new rules, nonveterans must make down payments ranging from 10 percent on houses costing less than $5000 to 50 percent on houses in the $24,250 or over class. Down payments for veterans will range from 5 percent to 45 percent.

Q. How does this compare with previous down-payment practices?

A. For veterans, 5 percent down, regardless of the cost of the home, was routine. FHA loans for nonveterans used to range from 10 to 25 percent.

Q. Has the period for paying off mortgages been reduced?

A. Yes, from a previous 30-year period to 20 years, except on $7000 and under houses on which 25 years will be allowed.

Q. How much down payment must a nonveteran fork up on a new $12,000 house (about the lowest-price, mass-produced home in the Washington area)?

A. At least $3100. A veteran must pay down at least $1900 on the same house.

Q. A nonveteran wants to buy a new $25,000 home. How much down payment must he make?

A. It will be $12,500; about $1000 less. Likewise, a $30,000 new home will mean $15,000 initial outlay, or $20,000 for a $40,000 home for the nonveteran purchaser.

Q. How about purchasing an existing $40,000 home through private loan institutions?

A. A 20 to 25 percent down payment—not unusual today—would be $8000 to $10,000.

Q. How about the nonveteran who wants to buy a $25,000 home but does not have the required 50-percent down payment. Can he borrow the $12,500 down payment from an uncle and secure a bank mortgage on the rest?

A. No. The new regulations stipulate no borrowing from any outside source, if a loan is also sought from a bank, VA or FHA.

Q. Are there any cases where GIs with Veterans Administration loans are exempt from the new rulings?

A. Yes, several.

1. When there is a bonafide contract, in writing, between the seller or builder and the veteran for the "purchase, construction, repair, alteration or improvement of residential property," signed before today.

2. When the seller or builder has applied to the VA for appraisal of the property before today.

3. When the loan is for construction, purchase, repair, or alteration of property involving more than two family units in a single structure, and payment or perhaps only 5 percent down.

4. Loans for hardship and unusual cases such as repair of flood damages.

Under the new rules, veterans must pay cash payaments ranging from 4.2 percent to 45 percent, depending upon the cost of the house.

Nonveterans must put down from 10 percent on $5000 homes to 50 percent on houses costing $24,250 or more.

Spokesmen for the Regional VA, local Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency all reported a continuous flood of telephone inquiries yesterday concerning the new rulings.

Most were prospective buyers who had already signed contracts to purchasehouses but had not moved in. They were advised that the new ruling does not effect loans arranged before today or bonafide contracts between purchaser and seller, signed before today.

Predictions that existing housing would take a price jump was based on the reasoning that this class of construction, sold with private financing, will be the only housing exempt from the curbs.

Though the Administration announced the new controls as a means to check inflationary pressures in the building industry and save materials and labor for the defense effort, several officials feared unfavorable public reaction.

Last night William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, urged the Administration to "revise" the regulations if it finds, "as we feel certain they will," that too few houses are built and that low and middle-income families are "completely cut off from the opportunity to purchase new homes."

Thomas P. Coogan, president of the National Association of Home Builders, led the industry's protesters, declaring "the controls unfortunately may prolong the housing shortage indefinitely."

CBS Color TV System Wins FCC Approval to Begin Nov. 20

Television, Inc., and other interested parties an additional opportunity to show their rival color systems. The Government agency has already spent the period starting September 26, 1949, and ending May 26, 1950, in hearings on this matter.

In conjunction with its decision yesterday the FCC denied an RCA petition for further hearings starting Dec. 5, and reminded the petitioner that much time was spent in gathering 9717 pages of testimony from 53 witnesses and that the Commission had officially viewed demonstrations of the proposed color television systems eight times.

CBS announced through its president, Frank Stanton, that it would be programming a total of 20 hours a week of color shows within two months time. Some of these shows will be available to affiliated stations via coaxial cable. WTOP-TV, the Washington outlet for CBS-TV, has announced its pleasure at the decision, but has made no specific plans for picking up the color shows. CBS will announce its definite plans soon. Neither the network programming, nor the local programming is expected to interfere with normal black and wnite broadcasts since most color shows will be scheduled in nours, not normally devoted to broadcasts so as not to interfere with regular commercial shows.

No other network has yet announced its plans for color transmission and WNBC, the Washington outlet for RCA's subsidiary, NBC, has not yet canceled its experimental broadcasts of the RCA (dot sequential) system of color television. These broadcasts, surrently seen at 3 to 4 p. m. and scheduled to be seen from 1 to 2 p. m. starting next Monday, are and can be seen in black and white.

Home viewers interested in seeing the CBS color shows in black and white will have their sets adjusted. Those interested in getting the shows in color must buy color converters, which will cost upward of $60 except for special economy-size converters wnich some manufacturers have said are possible. Eventually color sets will be manufactured with the color devices inside the sets. Converted sets will use a color wheel added to the front of the set. Of all the systems proposed, the CBS system is the least complex to run, the least expensive, and the most faithful in its rendition of color, according to the FCC. These factors were among those which persuaded the Government organization to adopt the CBS system in spite of the fact that it is not compatible with the present black and white standards. In its report yesterday, the commission reiterated its previous statement that all efforts to make color systems compatible in the past have resulted in unsatisfactory color, or too complex a system, or both.

Manufacturers who have looked coldly on color television in the past—will get a "heathy incentive" to develop direct view color sets with large tubes out of the decision, the FCC said. Stanton said that CBS is confident that "all segments of the industry will now unite to bring to the public this great advance in the television art and that within a few months color receivers and converters will be on the market." CBS had previously testified before the FCC that it would be willing to participate in manufacturing color sets if nobody else would do it.

Allen B. DuMont, speaking for the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., said DuMont would not manufacture the CBS type sets. An important manufacturer of both transmitting and receiving equipment, DuMont has steadily opposed the CBS system, and was verbally spanked by the FCC for trying to reduce CBS' position to the absurb by bringing before the FCC a giant model of the CBS equipment. DuMont does manufacture color equipment of the CBS type for closed circuit use in industry, but a wider band width is used in closed circuit broadcasting, giving more detail to the picture than is possible in general broadcasting.

RCA, speaking through Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, chairman of the board, last night called the FCC's decision "scientifically unsound and against the public interest." The RCA system, although complex and not yet ready for mass production, is compatible with present standards of black and white, and Sarnoff attacked the FCC decision on the ground of CBS' incompatibility. "No incompatible system is good enough for the American public. The hundreds of millions of dollars that present set owners would have to spend and that future set owners would have to pay to obtain a degraded picture with an incompatible system reduces today's order to an absurdity," he said.

Sarnoff did not say in clear terms whether RCA would manufacture sets capable of receiving CBS color, but he did say, "Regardless of what anyone else may feel called upon to do RCA will continue its efforts to advance the bedrock principles on which the sound future of color television can be built and will be built."

Two of the seven commissioners dissented in yesterday's report. Commissioner George E. Sterling, who concurred in the first report September 1, felt that responses from manufacturers indicate that the period between September 1 and September 29 when the manufacturers were required to say whether they would or would not incorporate bracket standards, was not sufficient.

Commissioner Sterling, an engineer, cited some of the very recent developments made by RCA in its direct view tube, as an example of improvements which the FCC would be "prudent" to view before making a final decision.

Commissioner Friena Hennock who dissented the first report, also dissented in this one. She suggested that some method other than bracket standards, or possibly modified bracket standards, be worked out by the industry to hold the compatibility problem at a standstill while further experiments are made. If such an alternative method of meeting the compatibility problem were made available within 60 to 90 days, the decision might safely be postponed until June 30, 1951, Miss Hennock suggested. In that interim a compatible system which meets all other requirements might be worked out, she said.

Press Menace Seen in New Security Law

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (AP).—A committee of the Inter-American Press Conference reported today that the United States' new internal security law, if fully enforced, could threaten freedom of the press. Debate is to be held Friday.

The report noted an "encouraging change" in press freedom throughout the Western Hemisphere, but reported suppression or censorship in six Latin-American nations.

In its report on the United States, the committee said "there is full freedom of the press," but added:

"We believe it pertinent to remark that the president of the republic affirms that the resolution (internal security law) recently approved by Congress gives to the Government of the United States the faculty to control thought.

"If this faculty were exercised, liberty of the press would be at least threatened, if not directly affected."

The committee said its survey, based on "documentary proof," found restrictions on freedom of the press in Argentina, Colombia, Guatemala, Peru, the Dominican Republic and Venezuela.

The report said Nicaragua has press freedom at present, but a law authorizes the country's president to impose censorship on any periodical.

Brazil, Chile and Cuba were listed as allowing full press freedom except for Communist publications.

The report said press freedom exists in Bolivia, Canada, Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Mexico, the United States, Panama, Puerto Rico, Uruguay, Jamaica, Trinidad and Bermuda. No report was made on other islands of the West Indies.

Of Paraguay the report said merely that conditions had improved in the past year.

[The Peronist evening newspaper La Epoca today described the Inter-American Press Conference in New York as a "bagful of cats who scratch themselves instead of debating because they have nothing to discuss or explain," the United Press reported.]

O'Dwyer Takes Oath, Starts Learning Job

By the United Press

Former New York Mayor William O'Dwyer was sworn in yesterday as United States Ambassador to Mexico and called it the "greatest honor I have ever received."

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, in whose office the ceremony was held, told O'Dwyer he was joining "great team" which is supporting President Truman and his policies.

Mrs. O'Dwyer, former fashion model Sloan Simpson, grabbed her husband's hand, bussed him heartily on the left cheek, and said happily:

"Mr. Ambassador, may I congratulate you!"

O'Dwyer, who is expected to appear before a Brooklyn grand jury investigating New York gambling before going to Mexico City early next month, reddened with obvious pleasure. He was reluctant, however, to discuss either the gambling inquiry or New York City politics.

He said he will be in New York about a month except for periodic trips here for State Department briefings on American-Mexican relations.

Acheson told O'Dwyer:

"Bill, it gives me a great deal of personal happiness as well as official pleasure to hand you this commission as Ambassador to Mexico. We have worked together before on tough jobs and we are going to support you in every way on your new job."

Will of Ford Widow Names Kin, Institute

DETROIT, Oct. 11 (U.P.)—Henry Ford's widow, who died September 29, left most of her nearly nine million dollar estate to her nine great-grandchildren and the tax-free Edison Institute, her will disclosed today.

Mrs. Clara Bryant Ford left four million dollars "for educational purposes" to the Edison Institute which was formed in 1929 by Mr. and Mrs. Ford and their one child Edsel. The institute operates Greenfield Village in Dearborn, Mich., a Detroit suburb.

Most of the remainder of Mrs. Ford's 63,260 shares of non-voting Ford Motor Co. stock was bequeathed to her family. Ford stock has no established value as it is never traded, but at the last tax appraisal it was worth $135 a share.

There are 3,280,255 shares of non-voting Ford stock, 3,089,908 of which are owned by the Ford Foundation. The rest is owned by family members.

Kefauver Claims Crime Links Between N. Y. and New Jersey operated gambling establishments in New Jersey and Saratoga.

As the hearing adjourned overnight, Kefauver said evidence indicated the six companies grossed more than two million dollars—but he said he thought the figure was too conservative.

Biggest take, according to his figures, was $183,634 in 30 days in 1947 by the company that operated Saratoga's Arrowhead Inn—one of the six companies listed.

Five of these operated in Bergen County, N. J., Kefauver said, with a new one stepping in as an old one folded up. The operations extended from 1945 to early this year.

Kefauver said Adonis was a figure in each of these groups.

In addition, Lynch's name was listed as a key figure in most of them.

Lynch also was named by Kefauver as a principal in the sixth firm, said to have operated gambling establishments in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., from a headquarters at Newark, N. J.

Kefauver later told newsmen he had a line on Anthony Accardo and Charles Fischetti, sought by the committee as witnesses.

Accardo is the reputed successor of Al Capone. Fischeti is a cousin of the late scarfaced gang leader and reputed head of a Nation-wide crime syndicate.

Kefauver had asked authorities in Mexico and South America to look for the pair.

Now, he said, he has been advised they landed by plane at Brownsville, Tex., October 5 and Accardo is on his way to Chicago and Fischetti to Brooklyn.

As the investigation got under way here, two New York City gamblers gave the committee an earful about dice and roulette operations in Jersey and elsewhere.

Charles H. Silver, one of the first witnesses, said he ran dice games in Hasbrouck Heights, Lodi, Palisades and Fort Lee, N. J.—all in Bergen County.

Stakes ranged from $5 to $300, the witness testified, and sometimes bets on the table totalled $1,000.

Another witness, John Barker, was quoted by the committee as saying he ran a roulette wheel in Broward County, just north of Miami, Fla.; in Omaha, Neb.; Denver; Saratoga, N. Y., and in New Jersey.

Barker, the committee said, told of six roulette wheels spinning at a time at Saratoga's Arrowhead Inn when he was there in 1947—in addition to dice games.

The testimony led Senator Tobey (R., N. H.), a member of Kefauver's committee, to brand Saratoga "exhibit A" and to demand:

"What is the reason that police don't raid them? and what is the reason the governor and State don't come down like a ton of bricks? Why is it that we don't get action on these things pronto? Why are they allowed to exist 24 hours?"

New York's Democratic candidate for governor, Representative Walter A. Lynch, last week mentioned Saratoga in a campaign speech in which he called upper New York Sate a "gambling den."

Lynch said his Republican opponent, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, had not "compelled the Republican district attorneys to enforce the law" in these areas.

A spokesman for Dewey at once demanded that Lynch put up or shut up on the charge and added:

"The Governor does not throw out or supersede the duly elected district attorneys of this State unless they are proved to be untrue to their oath of office."

At Saratoga Springs, District Attorney Carleton King, who took office last January 1, told newsmen:

"There isn't any gambling here now and there hasn't been during my administration."

Both Silver and Barker told the committee they knew nothing about protection payoffs to police—a linkup exposed in New York City by a Brooklyn grand jury.

But Kefavuer commented:

"From the testimony, it seems impossible to operate one of these . . . places without some kind of protection."

Kefauver, Democratic Senator from Tennessee, said his hearing here has no connection with the Brooklyn inquiry. And he added, it is only a scall-scale look-see and not the "all-out New York investigation" the committee has in mind.

"We're here to make inquiry about a specific transaction in which several people are involved, in a gambling transaction which we believe tied up with those in other States," Kefauver asserted.

He indicated the local phase of the alleged interstate gambling setup was centered around Lodi, N. J.

The committee chairman said he might go to New Jersey tomorrow to talk to Anthony Guarini, listed as a principal figure in Jersey gambling. Guarini is now in jail in Trenton on a gambling charge.

Kefauver said his committee has been trying for three weeks to find Adonis and serve him with a subpena. Adonis, whose real name is Doto, has been linked with gambling operations here and in Florida in past investigations.

Listing by U. S. as Subversive Is Final, Supreme Court Told

alty Review Board, which upheld a finding that she was disloyal to the Government, had acted "on the basis of secret charges unknown even to those who passed judgment on her."

The subversive listing was attacked by O. John Rogge as "a libelous label" which amounted to "a privately arrived-at and publicly announced whim" of the attorney general. The man who made up the lists published so far was Tom C. Clark, now Supreme Court justice. He was absent from the bench, indicating he will take no part in the cases.

Rogge said the program's real purpose was "to reginment the American people." Perlman called this nonsense and said the program was designed "to protect and safeguard our form of government." The solicitor general called the list only a "guide" and said it was but "one elemenet" in determining loyalty of a worker who may have been a member of or sympathetic to a listed group.

Justice Felix Frankfurter said the "crux" of the cases was the listing of a group without a hearing. Perlman told him Miss Bailey could not offer any evidence about an organization to which she belonged but which she contended was not subversive.

Both Frankfurter and Justice Harold H. Burton wondered if the new Communist Control Act, passed by Congress over President Truman's veto a few weeks ago, affected the cases. Perlman said it didn't. Burton noted the new law sets up a Subversive Activities Control Board to determine what organizations are Communist or Communist - front groups.

Frankfurter commented that the Attorney General "tomorrow" could have the three groups now in court "summoned before the new board for failure to register and there would be a full-dress hearing" such as is denied at present.

Perlman assured the justice that couldn't happen "tomorrow." The President has yet to name the five-man board. As to hearings under the present set-up, Perlman said they would "ruin the whole loyalty program." He said it would take "years and years" to settle the listing of a single group.

The International Workers Order, through attorney Allen R. Rosenberg, declared it is a 20-year-old fraternal group made up of persons, many of them aliens, from various national groups in this country. When listed it had 185,000 insurance policy holders among its members with lodges all over the country, including four here.

Rosenberg said it since has lost many members. The other groups likewise contended they had suffered from the public listing by the Attorney General but Perlman contended they had shown no real injury and hence had no standing in court to challenge the loyalty program.

Lanston Stock Control Passes To New Hands

By S. Oliver Goodman

Stock control of the seven-million-dollar Lanston Monotype Machine Co. has passed out of Washington hands, it was reported yesterday.

David S. Hendrick, Washington, has resigned as chairman of the board and is believed to have sold his large stock interest in Lanston. Hendrick, ailing in recent months, could not be reached in Florida where he is recuperating.

New chairman of the Lanston board is S. W. Muldowny, president of the Security Bank Note Corp. of New York. Also elected to the Lanston board were George L. Tribble, associated with the Maryland Trust Co. of Baltimore, and Walter Reed Wolf, senior vice president of the City Bank-Farmers Trust Co. of New York.

Although details were not revealed, it is believed that the three new directors represent more than 20 percent of the outstanding Lanston shares. This is considered to be effective working control.

The three resigned directors, all from Washington, are Hendrick, Mrs. Elizabeth G. Sterling (a former large stockholder), and Dr. John L. LaGorce.

Joseph F. Costello remains as president of Lanston, whose main offices are in Philadelphia, and A. E. Giegengack is executive vice president. From unofficial sources, it was learned that no change in Lanston management is planned by the new controlling interests; that their purchase is mainly as an investment.

STRAWS: September sales trend, as indicated by figures reported yesterday by four chains with outlets in Washington: Hund Stores Inc., down 15.1 per cent; Western Auto Supply, up 20 percent; A. S. Beck Shoe Corp., up 6.3 percent; Adam Hat Stores, Inc., up 1.7 percent.

SEES LEVELING. Maury Nee of Washington, chairman of the Retail Advisory Committee to Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, said a knock-off in the past three weeks might make imposition of price controls unnecessary. Nee told a retail furniture group in New York that some Administration officials were talking of setting up price and other controls for 5 years or more during partial mobilization. "I hate to think of what would happen under strict controls in a 5-year period," he said. "I believe controls may not be necessary if trade levels off, and I believe it has leveled off."

EXTRA DIVIDEND: Directors of National Savings & Trust Co. declared an extra dividend of $1 a share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2. President Bruce Baird reported yesterday. The dividends are payable November 1 to stock of record October 23.

ELECTIONS: Howard O. Robinson, jr., vice president of Folger, Nolan Inc., Washington investment firm, has been elected a director of Insurance Advisory Services, Inc. He will also serve as financial adviser and consultant. . . . Mrs. Velma Wheaton of United Air Lines has been elected president of the Women's Traffic Association of Washington. Other new officers: Helen Gabriel, vice president; Rebecca Sanford, record secretary; Lois Hogan, corresponding secretary, and Ellen Scholze, treasurer. . . . Winder R. Harris has been elected president of the local Propeller Club. Thomas B. Hartle is vice president; C. F. Kraft, secretary; Donald R. Demott, treasurer.

GIMMICK: In Atlantic City, the Wall Street Journal reports, there's a complete modern duplex apartment available for $40 a month rent. There's one requirement. Tenants must live in accordance with the rules of the American Sunbathers Association. That means without clothes.

ODD LOTS: An auto safety film will be unreeled at the Friday luncheon meeting of the D. C. Association of Insurance Agents in the Mayflower . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index this week declined for the fourth successive week, easing 2 cents to $6.48 . . . A Nation-wide syndicate headed by Union Securities Corp. yesterday offered publicly 1,078,744 shares of Pacific Power & Light Corp. at $14 a share . . . Group headed by Lehman Brothers will underwrite an issue of 396,571 additional shares of Ohio Edison Co. common stock. The winning bid asked an underwriting compensation of 19.92 cents a share . . . Shipments of steel products reached a record high of 40,559,000 tons in the first eight months of this year . . . American-Marietta Co. of Chicago has purchased Master Builders Co. of Cleveland in a cash transaction amounting to more than three million dollars.

Macy Net Dips Despite Record Sales in Year

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (AP).—R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., had record sales of $321,234,000 in the year ended July 29, but a slight decline in earnings from the previous year, Jack I. Straus, president, said today.

In the annual report to stockholders, Straus said the sales volume was 4¼ percent ahead of the previous year. However, net earnings were $6,471,000 or $3.35 a share compared with $6,834,000 or $3.57 a share the previous year.

U. S. Suit Calls Naval Stores Exchange 'Trust'

Attorney General McGrath yesterday announced a civil antitrust action against the Savannah, Ga., Cotton and Naval Stores Exchange, Inc., based on quotations on gum rosins and gum turpentine.

The announcement said the action in the Federal District Court at Savannah accuses seven corporations, besides the exchange, of conspiracy to fix prices posted for rosins and turpentine on the Savannah exchange and prices at which crude gum, rosins and turpentine are purchased from farmers and central distilleries.

"An object of this suit," McGrath said, "is to assure that prices on the Savannah exchange are arrived at through competition and not collusion."

Named in the suit are the five Columbia Naval Stores companies of Savannah, Fitzgerald, Hazelhurst, Jesup and Tifton, Ga.; Turpentine & Rosin Factors, Inc., and Pine Tree Products, Inc., both of Jacksonville, Fla.

The suit alleges prices for rosin and turpentine posted on the Savannah exchange as official market prices "are artificial and fictitious, and are established by application of certain arbitrary formulae, and in large part by fictitious sales between affiliated companies."

Bloodless Figures Enact a Melodrama

By Richard L. Coe

"WALK SOFTLY, STRANGER," at Keith's, is one of those bloodless melodramas that I've begun to think of as humanimated cartoons.

What I mean is, the story treats its people as objects, one might say humanimate objects. The hero never changes his expression; he speaks in a monotone; he may go through the most shattering experiences of violence and even l'amour, but nothing changes his chilled detachment.

In this screen play by Frank Fenton, Joseph Cotten is a gambler who wants to reform. He finds a girl, naturally a rich girl, who paralyzed in a skiing accident, lives in a wheelchair. It looks as though they will be a perfect couple, but some of his old cronies, whom he has robbed of several hundred grand, look him up and prepare to take him for The Last Ride. Cotten manages a backseat fight during which the car turns over. The accident hasn't hurt him much and he gives himself up for a jail term after which it's perfectly clear, the rich girl will marry him.

Such a story (Manny Seff and Paul Yawitz wrote the original) fits the contemporary market for screen violence like a tailor-made shroud. It allows us to imagine ourselves as the daring gambler, the successful holdup man, the smart-talker and the virile lover, and at the same time it makes clear that such behavior demands a payment to society, the jail term, with True Love and Riches triumphant at the end.

This is the theme of countless pictures. To get it across, the characters, through the years, have been refined to the point where they are scarcely recognizable as human beings. But they are something more than the cardboard figures of the old melodramas. Those had their blacks and whites, but they always were given to some passionate thumpings. Their reactions were expressed.

In "Walk Softly, Stranger," however, the reactions of the central characters are not expressed; they are purposefully veiled in impersonality. They are as much stock figures as the ten-twenty-thirt figures, but they express nothing. This is further heightened by the use of minor characters who do seem like life. In this case, the landlady, played by Spring Byington, the housekeeper of Esther Dale and the factory foreman of John McIntyre are the more or less realistic figures who heighten the inanimate tones of the leads.

The appearance of Joseph Cotten in such a part as this, after some years of playing recognizable humans, illustrates just how far this school of film-making has become part of our scene. To watch Cotton employing the airless mummery of, say, Humphrey Bogart is a new experience. The heroine's reactions, too, are on this humanimated level, with Valli as they lady in question. Paul Stewart and Howard Petrie are the criminal archetypes, bland, devious, fishlike.

Talk for Talk's Sake

Montgomery Hallmark's There But 'Eye Witness' Has Lapses

ROBERT MONTGOMERY has the happy faculty of giving something of himself to each picture he masterminds. "Eye Witness," at the Trans Lux his latest, has this quality, although it doesn't come off as he planned it.

Actor Montgomery has directed several unusual films in the past, "Lady in the Lake," "Ride a Pink Horse" and "Once More, My Darling," at the same time playing the lead. It's a neat trick if it can be done and, for his next try, here's one reviewer who'd like to have him concentrate on the direction. Because the man does have a point of view.

This time he's telling about an American lawyer whose wartime British buddy needs help. He's been flung in gaol for murder and the leisurely machinery of British jurispudence seems to prudent for the accused man's health.

He's accused of having murdered his stable partner; it looks as though he's tried to avenge the fellow's slur on his wife. The most that Actor Montgomery can do to help is to turn sleuth ,and he uncovers the fact that the dead man was a village Casanova.

Suspicion turns to a trim young widow, whose brother-in-law is the county's High Sheriff, a widower whose wife died at the birth of their daughter, now just growing out of her adolescence.

Our Robert likes the young widow, but she seems to be the missing witness who could prove that the death shot was fired in self-defense. By the merest chance, as on this side of the Atlantic, Montgomery does discover the missing witness.

There are some successful attempts to depict the cousinly difference between America and Britain. These are at their best in the dignified observations of the judge, capitally played by Felix Aylmer; it's a theme that was nicely followed by Burgess Meredith in a wartime documentary and a postwar sequel.

But there also is a good deal of talk-for-talk's sake that is not particularly amusing, and the twists of the story are hardly ever surprising.

"Eye Witness" is not quite a bore, but it does sag too much for complete satisfaction.—R. L. C.

"EYE WITNESS," an Eagle Lion Classics release, produced by Joan Harrison, directed by Robert Montgomery, screen play by Hugo Butler and Ian Hunter. At the Trans-Lux.

Montgomery Council Weighs Plea to Rezone Theater Site

The Montgomery County Council last night took under advisement a proposal to zone land now occupied by Olney Theater from residential A to commercial.

Request for the rezoning was made by property owners of the area, who contended they did not object to the operation of the Olney Theater, but wanted to prevent further encroachment of commercial uses on residential land by confining commercial enterprises to the Olney.

Were the theater to continue operation in a residential zone, they asserted, it might encourage other businesses to invade residential zones.

In another hearing, the council heard protests against use of property on Connecticut ave. north of the B. & O. Railroad as a miniature golf course. The land is now zoned commercial and both the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the county council have stated they have no authority to suspend the present use.

However, at last night's hearing, two solutions were advanced by Montgomery County officials to meet the problem. They suggested the land might possibly be rezoned residential A or C, in which case the present use might be invalid.

They also suggested area residents might ask the B. & O. Railroad, as a good will gesture, to cancel their permission for use of railroad property for a parking lot for the golf course. Off-street parking is required, under county zoning ordinances, for operation of any county golf courses.

Hiring of Boys Brings Fine

Dr. Pepper Bottling Co., 6101 Blair rd. nw., has been fined $100 in Juvenile Court for hiring four juvenile boys in violation of child labor laws here. The youngsters, hired for full-time work in the plant were 15, 16, and 17 years of age.

First Novel

Library Gets Maugham's Forgotten MS

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

"Of Human Bondage" may be a modern classic, but the unpublished first version of the novel is a worthless "curiosity," according to its author, W. Somerset Maugham.

Maugham, who gave the first version, "The Artistic Temperament of Stephen Carey," to the Library of Congress yesterday, said in a brief, informal talk at the presentation luncheon that he would have destroyed the two-volume manuscript had he not forgotten about it for 50 years.

Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans, in accepting the gift, described "Of Human Bondage" as "one of the great classics of our literature" and as "a unique work of a unique writer."

"Of Human Bondage," the story of clubfooted Philip Carey's search for a new way of life, is probably one of the best-known novels in the world today. More than a half million copies have been sold in the United States alone since it was first published in 1915, according to the estimate of Kenneth McCormick, and it has been translated into 17 or 18 European and Asiatic languages. McCormick, a vice president of Doubleday and Company, Maugham's American publisher, was among those present at the luncheon.

Maugham first wrote "The Artistic Temperament of Stephen Carey" when he was 23 years old, had received his medical degree and gone to Seville determined to be a writer. He did not find a publisher for it, however, and turned to the writing of plays. Years later he came back to the subject of the novel and wrote "Of Human Bondage," the manuscript of which was given to the library in 1946.

Maugham, who presented the manuscript of "The Artistic Temperament of Stephen Carey" to the library on the condition that it never be published, said the London publishers were "wise" to refuse it, "for it is a very, very bad book."

The 76-year-old story teller, a stocky, brown figure with brushed-back hair, said his autobiographical novel was "of no value whatsoever and of no importance. It is merely a curiosity like the fragments of poetry you see in an archeological museum that have been dug out. I should be ashamed to see it printed."

"Anyhow," he comforted Evans, "these two shabby little volumes will take up very little space."

Maugham, his English accent occasionally affected by a light stammer, said that if "Of Human Bondage" still finds readers in another half-century, "maybe a professor will take it into his head to write a piece about it for an academic magazine. But if he does and comes to the conclusion that if he (Maugham) had been in his right mind he would have burned it ("The Artistic Temperament"), my disembodied ghost would agree with him."

Maugham said that when he came to write "Of Human Bondage" he didn't even trouble to look at the earlier book to see what there was he could make use of. "For the autobiographical part," he said, "I trusted to my own sour recollections."

Speaking at a dinner meeting of the Washington Book Club in the Cosmos Club last night, Maugham said the only reason people become authors is "because we can never think of the apt and clever thing to say until the time is past."

Fairfax Zone Law Change Is Requested

Fairfax County's board of supervisors was asked yesterday to amend the zoning laws so as to discontinue the zone classification of any private property once it becomes involved in condemnation.

The move apparently was related to reports that a new Washington airport may be located in the county. Lewis Travis of Chantilly requested the amendment so that county property owners will not be handicapped by having their land specifically classified while engaged in price negotiations stemming from condemnation proceedings.

The supervisors referred the proposal to the county planning commission for study.

Without the amendment, Travis said, an owner of land classified as agricultural would have to yield his property at a relatively low price in the event that land were sought by the Government for an airport "or some other purpose." With no zoning classification, however, he contended the property could be sold in terms of its "true value" as determined by the use for which it might be sought by an agency bringing condemnation action.

2 Youths Put On Probation In Auto Thefts

Two Alexandria youths charged with stealing radios and other equipment from parked cars in Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties yesterday were placed on 5-years' probation after trial in Arlington Circuit Court.

The two, Benton L. Hitt, jr., 21, of 217 S. Patrick st., and Robert L. Almond, 18, of 807 Duke st., also were given 5-year jail sentences, which were suspended.

Police said they were responsible for 15 robberies in Arlington, 23 in Alexandria and 8 in Fairfax County. The two youths called themselves "Crime Incorporated," according to police.

BEDFORD, England, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—A low-flying swan knocked a Bedford girl off her bicycle today. Both will recover.

Roof-Stranded Man Rescued By Firemen

Haskell F. Clark's interest in new roofs waned considerably yesterday after he found himself stranded in a perilous position atop the one on a neighbor's home.

No. 11 Truck Company had to raise a ladder to bring Clark down to earth.

Clark, 49, a Potomac Electric Power Co. guard, had a new roof put on his home at 6608 2d st. nw. recently. So did a neighbor, J. R. Jenkins, a retired Washington policeman, of 6611 2d st. nw.

Yesterday, Clark climbed a ladder to survey Jenkins' new roof. He got up all right but when he started to descend he began to slip and slide. He held on as tightly as he could until the rescue was affected.

Holtzoff Raps Due Process of Law Denial

Too many administrative officials in the Government are denying individuals due process of law, Judge Alexander Holtzoff of District Court charged yesterday.

The jurist made his blast in granting a temporary injunction preventing District Insurance Superintendent Albert F. Jordan from carrying out revocation of an insurance license to Car Credit, Inc., of 1713 7th st. nw.

Jordan was accused in the injunction suit of ignoring basic constitutional rights of Car Credit, an auto finance firm. The judge singled out Jordan in his blast.

No Lawyer, Jordan Says

Later, Jordan acknowledged to reporters that he was not a lawyer but refused to comment further.

From the bench during the injunction hearing, Judge Holtzoff declared:

"I think there are too many administrative officials who know no law, who are not lawyers and who consult no lawyers. These officials have no knowledge of the elementary principles of due process, nor do they know how to use the basic principles of due process.

"I have noticed that on other occasions there have been complaints that this insurance superintendent acted without due process."

Judge Holtzoff said that certain facts in the Car Credit case made a "bad impression" on his mind.

The firm had forfeited $200 on a charge before Jordan in February that it had failed to give a car purchaser an insurance policy certificate he paid for on the vehicle.

Second Complaint

Then, in August, another complaint was made. Here the company was charged with failing to issue a policy to an auto purchaser who complained after his automobile was stolen.

Attorney William R. Lichtenberg charged that at the revocation hearing before Jordan, the complainant was not present to be cross-examined

Lichtenberg added that the only "legal" evidence in the case was the claim of Car Credit that it was never paid for the insurance policy, and that insurance was never ordered by the purchaser.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman protested that there were other complaints against Car Credit.

"If Car Credis is as bad as you say," replied Judge Holtzoff, "no reputable insurance firm would deal with them."

Giants Spend $125,000 for 3 Minor League Stars

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

YANKEE STADIUM had its cold war last week when the punchless Yankees and Phils wound up their practically bloodless World Series. On Saturday a couple of teams that can hit will move into the Stadium, and the old place will resound with rock-and-sock. It comes up Army vs. Michigan.

It would please Michigan very much to win this one, not alone because it would be a novel experience. The Wolverines have never beaten an Army team in three tries at it, but they would trade the novelty of that joy for the higher satisfaction of knocking off Earl Blaik's Cadets on general principles.

Povich

Benny Oosterbaan, their head coach, who used to catch Benny Friedman's passes with such finesse 25 years ago he became a three-time all-American, has a score to settle with Army anyway. At Ann Arbor last season, Army whacked down a 25-game Michigan winning streak that Oosterbaan had mostly inherited from Fritz Crisler.

So, Oosterbaan is not unaware of another fact as he primes his team for Saturday's Yankee Stadium affair. On that day Army will have a 22-game winning streak of its own as Michigan's target.

A BIT of the lustre went out of Saturday's game, however, when Michigan was slapped down by Michigan State in its opener, 14-7. The Wolverines were supposed to come up to the Army game with its single-wing technique unbeaten. They rebounded nicely last weekend to defeat Dartmouth, 27-7, but it is unsurprising they are being tabbed as 10-point underdogs against the Cadets.

Blaik's Black Knights swept past Colgate and Penn State in their first two tests, and the suspicion is that he has another unbeaten season ahead, despite the loss of 19 lettermen including Quarterback Arnold Galiffa. Blaik had to go no farther than his own fireside to come up with a replacement for Galiffa, turning the quarterbacking job over to 20-year-old Bob Blaik.

Michigan won't be playing a better team than Army this season, nor a rougher one. One of the problems of any team on the same field with Army is to stay healthy. The Cadets work up a wonderful fury on the football field. It's clean football, but they hit awful hard. Three of Army's opponents, in particular, discovered that fact last season.

ON SATURDAY, Michigan's good tailback, forward passer and key man in their single wing, Chuck Ortmann, will be up against Army for the second time in two years. He saw only a couple of minutes of last season's game. After the second running play, Ortmann was a stretcher case, and Army had to deal no more with Michigan's best back.

A week later I saw Army play Harvard up at Cambridge. Harvard's best back was Billy Roche. Army got to him on the opening kick-off, and that was his last play of the day. A couple of weeks after that Fordham went up to West Point with a big team and there were more fists thrown than footballs. There was talk of a break in relations.

If the Michigans can keep Ortmann healthy, they may be no pushover for Army, might even win Saturday's contest. He will probably be the best ball handler on the field. Whether he's running or throwing, he's dangerous. And Oosterbaan has equipped him with optional plays that will test the Army's defenses. He's a rangy, tow-head of six-one, weighs 188, and has big hands that can almost cuddle a football.

FOR YOUNG Bobby Blaik, Saturday's contest will be his biggest test. His daddy-coach started grooming him for the Army's T-quarterbacking job a couple of years ago, brought him along slowly in the shadow of the great Galiffa. Paternalism doesn't figure in the case, otherwise. Head Coach Blaik simply believes Son Bobby is the best of his quarterback candidates.

Of Blaik it is said, "If you know the guy, he'll come up with a good football team even if he has to breed it himself," if I may be permitted to reswipe this week's quote from Life Magazine. Blaik has another, older son, William, who is 22, and bigger than Bobby, but who was permitted to matriculate at Dartmouth, not West Point.

The Army coach, a graduate of West Point, sought to wangle no appointment to the Academy for Billy Blaik. He wasn't football minded, says Blaik. "Billy likes hunting, fishing and winter sports—the Dartmouth type," Blaik added slyly.

Will Texas Spoil It?

Oklahoma's 23-Game Record in Jeopardy

THIRD-RANKING OKAHOMA and fourth-ranking Texas, both unbeaten, crash into each other in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas Saturday in one of the day's biggest games.

The Longhorns are slight favorites to halt Oklahoma's 23-game winning streak.

It's the key game on this week's pick-the-winners-contest. Fans must select not only the winner, but the probable score. The winner will receive two tickets to the Southern California-Navy game at Baltimore October 21 as well as first-class, round-trip transportation for two.

Contest Rules

THE CONTEST each week will include 20 major college games. The contestant will select the winner (or tie) in each of these games. There will also be a twenty-first game for which the contestant must give the "Probable Score," to be considered by the contest judges only in case two or more persons tie on the first 20 games.

All entries must be in the hands of the Football Contest Editor not later than 9 p. m. Friday of each week. Entries should be left at the Service Counter in the lobby of The Washington Post Bldg., 1337 E St. N. W.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week shall be declared the winner. In case of ties, all persons sharing in the tie will receive duplicate awards.

The decisions of the judges will be final.

Entries submitted must be legible, with the selections listed in the order they are announced in The Washington Post.

Entries may be handwritten or typewritten. However, carbon copies and mimeographed copies or copies made by any other duplicating machine will NOT be accepted. You may submit as many entries as you wish.

No employe of The Washington Post or member of his immediate family is eligible to participate in this contest.

No person will be eligible to win the weekly contest twice.

Fazio to Tell Woodmont Today He's Not Quitting

George Fazio, Woodmont Country Club pro, and Woodmont officials will meet this morning to talk about the report that Fazio plans to resign. His one-year contract expires April 1.

Fazio, who was in a three-way playoff for the National Open championship last June, yesterday said:

"Those stories are untrue. I have never considered quitting, nor have I told anyone I planned to resign."

Leopold Freudberg, the Woodmont board member who signed Fazio last March, said:

"The stories that George plans to leave surprise me. As far as I know, he is perfectly satisfied here. If he weren't, I'm sure he would have told me since I signed him for the club. However, we'll meet tomorrow and thrash this matter out."

Freudberg says he likes Fazio and considers him an excellent golfer and teacher. When asked if he was satisfied with Fazio's work, he said, "that's another story."

Some Woodmont members were reported to be dissatisfied because Fazio was spending too much time on the tournament circuit and not enough in the pro shop.

Fazio's 1-year contract permitted him to play in the National Open, PGA, Masters and Tam O'Shanter after the winter tour. However, he also played in some minor tournaments—Fazio says with full consent of the Woodmont governors, some members say with reluctant permission.

Fazio "Won't Resign"

When asked if Fazio had full permission to play in the summer tournaments, Freudberg replied, "he played, didn't he?"

Fazio said, "As far as I am concerned, neither my tournament play nor my scrap steel business in Conshococken, Pa., interfere with my work as Woodmont pro. What do the Woodmont members believe? I don't know. I simply know that I have no intention of resigning."

Fazio, who hails from the Philadelphia area, stands nineteenth in the PGA list of leading money winners of 1950 with $6,742.17 in winnings in official tournaments.

Syracuse Moves Game To Night Because of Army-Michigan TV

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 11 (U.P.).—The football game between Syracuse and Penn State, scheduled for Saturday afternoon, has been switched to a night contest to avoid conflict with television of the Army-Michigan game at New York's aYnkee Stadium, it was announced today.

Officials indicated they believed that the television would hurt the atendance at the game here, which had been figured to be a near sell-out.

Alice Bauer Upsets Kielty

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Alice Bauer, elder of the comely golffing sisters, today staged her second straight upset performance by a one-up score over Dot Kielty of Long Beach, Calif., to show the way into the quarter-finals of the Texas Women's Open Golf tournament.

Joining Alice in tomorrow's round of eight were three other professionals, including younger sister Marlene, and four amateurs. They were pros Patty Berg, Minneapolis, and Betty Jameson, San Antonio, and amateurs Betsy Rawls of Austin, Tex.; Betty MacKinnon of Dallas, Beverly Hanson of Indio, Calif. and Pat Devaney of Grosse Ile, Mich.

Miss Berg dropped Betty Dood of San Antonio, 4 and 3, with a three-under-par 34 front nine.

Miss Jameson stopped Helen Detweiler, Indio, Calif., 3 and 2. Miss MacKinnon ousted Bea McWayne, Birmingham, Ala., 3 and 2. National amateur champion Hanson nosed out Polly Riley, Fort Worth, 2 and 1. Medalist Rawls routed Mrs. H. C. Riedel, Dallas, 7 and 6. Miss Devaney eliminated Marilyn Smith, Wichita, Kans., two up.

Tomorrow afternoon's pairings include Rawls vs. MacKinnon; Hanson vs. Devaney; A. Bauer vs. Berg; Jameson vs. M. Bauer.

Jets Lose, 19-14; Chicago Skater Injures Wrist

A grand slam by player-coach Russ Massro broke a 14-14 deadlock in the closing seconds last night as the Chicago Westerners defeated the Washington Jets, 19-14, before 2114 at Uline Arena. Massaro scored 10 points.

It was a wild affair. Judy Hansen of the Westerners landed in Providence Hospital with a possible fractured wrist. Annis Jensen and Gertie School were fined $10 for fighting Jensen also was expelled.

D. C.'s Schroeder Top Safety Man

Gene Schroeder, Anacostia product who plays safety for the University of Virginia, leads the Nation in punt returns with 170 yards for six efforts, according to National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics.

Hoya Hardiman Hard Man; Terps Burning Over Prank

Maryland Riled by Arsonists' 'G. U.' Scorched Earth Policy

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The work of a prankster on the night of September 29 has given Maryland's football team an added incentive for beating Georgetown Saturday.

On the eve of Maryland's stadium dedication game with Navy two weeks ago, someone got into Byrd Stadium in the dead of the night, and burned the letters "G. U." on the 40-yard line of the new sod at Byrd Stadium.

A quick re-sodding job the next morning partially obscured the letters, but they were still plenty visible to the Terps' when they took the field against the Middies.

They haven't forgotten it. The Terps' aren't exactly accusing Georgetown students, "but we are quite certain students from American University, George Washington or Catholic University didn't do it. We don't like it and haven't forgotten the incident." One of the Maryland players said yesterday.

Coach Jim Tatum and his assistants haven't mentioned the matter to the players—they're too busy planning for the Hoya game—but they don't have to.

Each morning on the way to classes several of the players walk over to the new stadium and point to the spot where the letters were burned.

The Terps' wound up the rough part of their preparations for the game with a bruising scrimmage yesterday. The varsity ran against Georgetown defenses and did fairly well.

Fullback Karney Scioscia injured his leg on the last play of the skirmish. It isn't believed serious, however. Johnny Troha, an offensive guard whose great blocking played a vital part in last week's startling victory over Michigan State, also got his leg banged up.

Halfback Ed Modzelewski, nursing an injured leg, and Tackle Ray Krouse, recovering from the same ailment, missed the scrimmage. Neither has had pads on all week.

Georgetown holds a 5-4 edge in the current series. Before Maryland became the University of Maryland, the Hoyas swept all six games from Maryland, then known as Maryland Agricultural College. The "Farmers" have gotten real slick since then.

Hilltoppers Oblivious to Experts And Fact Old Liners Rank 8th

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

None of the experts concede Georgetown the slightest chance against Maryland at Griffith Stadium Saturday.

However, if they're to be victims of a slaughter by the country's eighth ranking team, the Georgetown boys themselves are blissfully unaware of it.

With all the feeling a 20-year-old college captain can muster, Tommy Hardiman said on the practice field yesterday, "There's no sense in going out on the field if you think you're going to lose. You might just as well stay on the bench with that attitude. We're going out to win."

Hardiman, a great defensive ballplayer who also is No. 1 quarterback on offense, literally was knocked out in the Tulsa game early in the third period. He suffered a head injury but X-rays proved negative and he insists he's fully ready for the Terps.

Rugged Bob Fortunato, 235-pound tackle who's the biggest man on the squad, doesn't look like he scares easily, either. Said Fortunato, "The fellows realize what we have to do in this one. I feel they're going to do it."

Soph Mike Carra, who packs 210 pounds on his squat 5-foot-7 frame, hopes to be an offensive guard against Maryland. Mike spoke up, "We've got the material, if we ever explode. I can't think of a better day for it than Saturday."

Big Bob Noppinger, fine end last year who's trying hard to get accustomed to his tackle spot, said, "We've been bad, real bad. I'm sure we're going to improve."

It was Noppinger who turned in an All-America game in the victory over Wake Forest last year when the Deacons were three-touchdown favorites. He gave so much and was so exhausted after that effort, he was ordered to spend the night in Raleigh and followed the team home by a day.

Jim Slowey, 220-pound soph linebacker who was voted Georgetown's most valuable player in the Tulsa game, said, "A lot of people are going to be surprised Saturday. Our guys are going to wake up and realize what a good ball club we have."

Gino Pagluica, 190-pound linecracker who looked the part of a good fullback in picking up 100 yards in 14 tries against Tulsa, said, "If everybody's up, we'll give 'em a real game. I can't think of any reason we won't be up."

Flatly predicting victory at Georgetown is Father Joseph Cohalan, S. J., assistant faculty moderator of athletics. Father Cohalan just says quietly, but with conviction, "We're going to win."

Where to Buy Hoyas-Terps, GW-VPI Tickets

There are plenty of tickets available for Washington's two big weekend college football games at Griffith Stadium, George Washington vs. Virginia Tech Friday night and Maryland vs. Georgetown Saturday afternoon.

For G. W. vs. Virginia Tech, tickets may be bought at the Co-Op Shop, 21st and H sts. nw. and Griffith Stadium.

For Maryland vs. Georgetown, tickets are available at Fairway Sports Store, 1328 G st. nw.; Champion Sports, 816 13th st. nw.; American Automobile Association, 17th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.; Georgetown and Maryland Universities, and Griffith Stadium.

Geri Top Passer, Gilmer 2d; Dudley 6th in Receiving

Pittsburgh, Oct. 11 (AP).—Joe Geri—strictly a running and punting halfback in his University of Georgia playing days—leads the National Football League in passing.

Geri has compiled an average of 8.07 yards per attempted pass—a new rating system—to shade Harry Gilmer of Washington for the NFL chucking championship. Gilmer's average is an even 8 yards.

The 25-year-old Geri has completed 14 passes for 218 yards in 27 tries. Gilmer has connected on 19 out of 52 for 416 yards and 4 touchdowns.

Virginia Tech Appears Set-Up For 7th-Ranked GW Passing

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

GEORGE WASHINGTON appears to have a set-up opponent in Virginia Tech Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

The Colonials have the seventh best team passing average in the Nation while the Gobblers' aerial defense is one of the worst.

In two games, the Gobblers have already given up 12 touchdowns, either scored or set up by passes. Three other touchdowns came on interceptions of Tech passes, and another on a kickoff return.

The Gobblers lost their first two games to Quantico, 61-21, and Virginia, 47-6. They are two touchdown underdogs against the Colonials.

Tech is hoping to offset its defensive weakness with a strong running game. The Gobblers have demonstrated they can score by running.

Trailing Quantico, 34-0, at halftime, they came back to make three touchdowns on runs of 84 yards by Sterling Wing and 12 yards by Bill Stark. Stark, converted from end to quarterback a few days before the season started, passed to End Ron Casto for the third score.

The Gobblers gave Virginia a whale of a fight for one half. They trailed by only 13-6 at intermission, before they were worn down by the Cavaliers' depth in the line.

National Leaguers Win Exhibition

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 11 (AP). A group of National Leaguers trounced the American Leaguers in an all-star exhibition baseball game here tonight before an estimated 3500 fans. The score was 9 to 1.

Sid Gordon, with two homers, Ted Kluszewski and Red Schoendienst with three hits apiece, led the National Leaguers' 13-hit assault on Early Wynn and Lou Brissie.

Jack Onslow Will Manage Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 11 (AP)—Fiery Jack Onslaw, who was let out as manager of the Chicago White Sox in July, today signed a 1-year contract to manage the Chattanooga Lookouts of the Southern Association. The Lookouts are owned by Washington.

The 60-year-old former major league catcher replaces Fred Walters, who took over the Lookouts in 1948.

The appointment was announced by Joel Engel, Lookout president. Engel, a battery-mate of Onslow at Buffalo 35 years ago, did not reveal the salary involved.

Onslow, known for a fiery disposition and love of discipline, went from Memphis to Chicago after the 1948 season. He caused a stir by clamping down on training regulations and fining several players. As at Memphis, he finished higher than many experts predicted but clashed with some players in so doing.

A series of differences with General Manager Frank Lane preceded his dismissal last summer.

At Chattanooga, he will have another opportunity to guide a lowly team to higher ground. The Lookouts finished last in 1948 and 1949 and seventh last season.

Rocca KOs Superman In Wrestling Feature

Antonio Rocca knocked out Golden Superman with an airplane spin and body slam in 22 minutes of last night's wrestling feature before 2300 spectators at Turner's Arena.

Artie Wilson, Al Gettel in Deal; Phils Get '2d Ruth'

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (AP).—Major league baseball began preparing for the 1951 season today by dipping into the minor leagues in one of the busiest trading sessions in years with their little brothers.

The New York Giants were the most expensive shoppers. The Giants pulled a $125,000 deal with the champion Oakland Oaks of the Pacific Coast League which involved seven players and cash.

The Giants obtained Ray Noble, Cuban Negro catcher, Artie Wilson, Negro shortstop and 23-game winner Allen Gettel from the Oaks. In return the Giants shipped cash, Outfielder-First Baseman Bert Haas and Joe Lafatta and Pitchers Wes Bailey and Bill Ayers from their pennant-winning Minneapolis team of the American Association to the Oaks.

An ironic twist is that the Giants sold Noble to the Oaks at the outset of the past season. Noble alone was valued at $75,000 by the Oaks. The 24-year-old long ball hitter batted .316 and drove in 79 runs.

Wilson led the coast league in batting in 1949 but tumbled to .306 this year in the marathon 200-game coast league season. Gettel was the Oaks' lone 20-game winner. He previously was up with the New York Yankees, Cleveland and Chicago White Sox and Washington.

The Philadelphia Phillies also loosened the purse strings, handing out a $40,000 bonus to get Tom Casagrande, 20-year-old left-handed pitcher of Fordham University. The Phils said 10 major league clubs were after Casagrande. He will report to the Phils' Terre Haute club of the Three Eye League for 1951 before moving to the Phils in 1952.

Club officials described the combination pitcher-slugger as a "potential Babe Ruth."

The Cincinnati Reds sold Pitcher John Hetki to Toronto and also released Catcher Dave Poole, Outfielder Harold Stamey and Infielder Whitey Reis to their Columbia South Atlantic League farm. In return the Reds recalled Outfielder Boz Hazle and Pitcher Gerry Blackburn, both bonus players from Columbia.

Brooklyn traded Lefthanded Pitcher Mal Mallette and cash to their Hollywood Pacific Coast League farm for Third Baseman Jim Baxes.

The Dodgers also sold First Baseman Dee Fondy of their Fort Worth Texas League team to the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs now have three former star Brooklyn minor league first basemen, Fondy, Preston Ward and Chuck Connors.

Singleton Sold To Toronto by Nats

Pitcher Elmer Singleton, who came to the Nats from the Pacific Coast League earlier this year, was sold to Toronto of the International League yesterday.

Griffith said it was a straight cash transaction. The sum was not announced.

AT BOWIE.

DEAR FOLKS:

Johnny Arduini, Washington fighter and jockey agent for Jimmy Baird will be in uniform in the near future but he isn't certain which one. He is in the naval reserves and also has passed his physical for the Army. He is a brother of Ray Arduini, the District jockey. Apprentice Jockey A. A. Tryon received notice from Uncle Sam that he is okay and is awaiting the call. Long shots have had the handicappers talking to themselves the last few days. They are still trying to find how Town March won after being out of the money for two years. Brick has the best of the weights for Saturday's Southern Maryland Handicap but that isn't any reason he should win. Ray Haight arrived from Detroit and goes to work on the honors at Laurel. See you at the rail.—BILL.

MEN OVER 25 WHOSE HAIR IS GETTING THIN-GROOM IT WITH KREML

TO AVOID THAT GREASY LOOK—MAKE HAIR LOOK MORE ABUNDANT

If you're feeling self-conscious about your hair getting thin on top or receding at the temples, don't call attention to it by plastering your hair down with greasy, sticky products which leave an unsightly, dirt-trapping, shiny film on the scalp. Now is the time to graduate to Kreml! Kreml Hair Tonic is different from any dressing you've ever used. It never looks greasy or sticky—it never plasters hair down. Instead, Kreml is especially blended to thoroughly spread through the hair and make it look naturally well-groomed—make hair look thicker, more abundant. Also unsurpassed to remove dandruff flakes and give sleepy scalps a delightful 'wake-up' tingle. Ask for the new large 16-oz. size of Kreml Hair Tonic and save nearly 50%.

B-CC High Student Finally Wins Contest After 3 Years

Patience paid off for 16-year-old Dick Wilson of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Every week for the past three years he's been sending in his entry blank for The Washington Post's pick-the-winners contest.

DICK WILSON

At last, he's won. His prize: two tickets to the Army-Michigan game in New York Saturday as well as first class round-trip transportation for two.

He'll take his dad, editor of Armed Forces magazine, as his guest.

Dick lives at 11 E. Melrose st., Chevy Chase, Md. He picked 16 of the 20 winners, as did three other contestants, but Dick edged the others out by being closest to the probable score of the Tennessee-Duke game. He called it Tennessee 24, Duke 14. The other three all picked Duke to win. The actual score was Tennessee 28, Duke 7.

Wilson lost out on two ties, North Carolina-Georgia and Washington State-Southern California, and picked Alabama to win over Vanderbilt and Iowa to defeat Indiana. Vanderbilt and Indiana were the winners.

Two years ago, Dick picked 18 out of 20 games, but lost out when another contestant hit 19 out of 20 to win. But Dick didn't quit. He kept right on sending in his selection each week and now he's won.

The runnersup were: David M. Schiller, 2800 Wisconsin ave. nw.; W. Hetzel, 2530 18th st. nw., Arlington, and John Ryan, 4806 S. 28th st., Fairlington, Va.

Odds '1000 To 1' He Is Done Racing

By John Chandler

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (AP).—The racing career of Middleground appeared ended today after the winner of this year's Kentucky Derby pulled up lame in a workout at Belmont Park.

"The chances are a thousand to one if he ever races again," said his saddened trainer, Max Hirsch.

Hirsch said X-rays showed two fractures of the sesamoid joint (ankle bone) of the right forefoot.

"We'll probably be able to save him but that's about all," he said.

When he recovers, Middleground will be sent down to the farm for stud purposes.

Middleground won only two races in 10 starts this year but they were major three-year-old classics—the Derby and Belmont Stakes. The King Ranch colt missed sweeping the triple crown by finishing second to Hill Prince in the Preakness.

The chestnut son of Bold Venture—Verguenza was out on Belmont's main track for a workout when the accident happened. The injury was so serious Middleground had to be removed to his barn in an ambulance.

Bill Boland, who was an apprentice rider when Hirsch gambled and let him handle Middleground in the Derby, was up for the workout. Later, Boland said he heard a "pop" when Middleground suddenly broke down and pulled up lame.

Oklahoma Tackle Lineman of Week; 3 Terps Rate High

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (AP).—Tackle Jim Weatherall of unbeaten Oklahoma today was named the Associated Press lineman of the week. Maryland's Bob Ward, Chet Gierula and Pete Augsberger were high in the balloting, too.

Weatherall's blocking and tackling in the final minutes led the Sooners to a 34-28 victory over Texas A. & M. last Saturday.

Guard Ward, Tackle Gierula and End Augsberger led a hard charging Terp line in the 34-7 upset over Michigan State Saturday. Gierula was selected as The Washington Post's college player of the week.

Hocotia Wins Bowie Purse; Nina Rose 2d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BOWIE, Oct. 11.—Spotting his rivals from 6 to 17 pounds, Dr. W. C. Ensor's Hocotia won in the role of favorite in the Bayard Purse, featuring the midweek program here.

Jockey Willie Downs, who has been performing in excellent style here, brought the chestnut colt home a neck in front of Watt Elliott's Nina Rose. Third in the field of nine juveniles was V. Posnor's Miram's Boy.

The victory was the fourth in 16 outings for Hocotia, and the Son of Peace Chance paid $6 after going the mile and 70 yards over a slightly dull track, termed "good" by the chart crew, in 1:48 1-5.

A crowd of 6700 turned out in excellent weather for Bowie's first nine-race program. The fourth race profits, an estimated $3000, went to the fund being raised for horsemen who lost thoroughbreds in the Marlboro fire.

The parade of long shot doubles here continued, with the combination of 4 and 9 paying $691.40. Harry Stutts' Chaldson won the first race in a mild surprise at a $10.40 mutuel. The big punch was put in the payoff by Town March, owned by Frank Tuazzo and trained by Harry Susini.

Town March, ridden by veteran Jockey Jimmy Layton, won the first race of her career and paid $83.60 in her own right. The 3-year-old had failed to be in the money in 20 previous starts.

Redskins' Road Games Will Be Televised Here

The Washington Redskins announced yesterday, that all of the National Football League team's remaining games away from home will be televised over a three-station hookup.

The four games with Philadelphia, New York Giants, Cleveland and Pittsburgh will be seen over WMAL-TV in Washington; WTVR, Richmond, Va., and WTAR-TV, Norfolk, Va.

Winless Episcopal Still Has Chance to Better '49 Record

By Bill Gilbert

Episcopal High of Alexandria hasn't won a game yet, but Coach Lee McLaughlin believes his team has an excellent chance of bettering its 1949 record.

Last year, the Virginia school won three games and lost five. This year, Episcopal has lost, 20-6, to McKinley Tech, and tied Mercersburg, 7-7.

Episcopal has seven more opponents on its schedule, with a better than even chance against four of them. McLaughlin feels he can beat St. Christopher's of Richmond, Randolph-Macon of Front Royal, Va., St. Paul's of Baltimore and Bullis "B."

Of the three teams McLaughlin fears most, Woodberry Forest heads the list. Episcopal's traditional rival defeated Hill, of Pottstown, Pa., always a prep school powerhouse, 15-0, last week.

The two other tough schools are Virginia Episcopal of Lynchburg, and Gilman Country School, of Baltimore.

Two boys from Athens, Ga., Jim Thornton and Jerry Michael, are Episcopal's best runners. What McLaughlin likes most about them is that they don't give up when they are tackled. They keep their legs going and usually wind up with a couple yards more than when they were first hit.

Episcopal meets St. Christopher's of Richmond Saturday at Episcopal in the eleventh meeting between the two schools. No. 11 might be unlucky for St. Christopher's.

Amazing Success from Post Help Wanted Ads

Reports Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company

New to the District, the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company placed Help Wanted ads in The Post for mechanics and salesmen.

The response to these ads—writes Mr. Paul Mayer, General Sales Manager of the company—was "overwhelmingly successful."

The Pepsi-Cola Company's experience with Post want-ads is proof again that The Washington Post reaches the right people.

Miss Lee Day
Classified Department
Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

Dear Miss Day:

I am glad to report that our Help Wanted ads in your classified section for Vending Machine Mechanics and Route Service Salesmen were overwhelmingly successful.

As a result of these ads, an excellent group of men applied for the jobs. It is a long time since I have had the pleasure of interviewing applicants of such high caliber, and fine background. As a matter of fact, the majority of the applicants were already employed, and wanted to make changes to better themselves.

You will be interested to know that three-fourths of the men interviewed advised us that they had seen the ad in The Washington Post.

This experience has been particularly useful to us, because we are new to the District area. In the future, whenever want ads are to be placed - we have proof positive where to go for results.

Georgetown Seeks Court Aid to Ban Odors of Rendering Plant

Sweltering heat, yes. Ants, O. K. Even rats. But residents of Georgetown took "that stench" to court yesterday.

The rendering plant of the Milton Hopfenmaier Co. at 3300 K st. nw. had strained the collective patience and noses of 101 Georgetown citizens past the breaking point.

Men and women who said they had been offended by the smell for as much as 40 years were given a hearing by Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King.

"Most any time, but mostly just as you sit down to dinner," replied Joseph A. Waters, who was born in Georgetown 81 years ago and has lived at 1233 33d st. for 40 years.

"What kind of an odor is it?"

Company representatives did not deny the smell, but said they had spent more than $28,000 in the last year in a effort to eliminate it and river pollution.

After more than two hours of wrangling, King persuaded the citizens to wait until April 1, provided that the company install a catalytic incineration system by that time.

"If it still smells in Georgetown after that, we will prosecute," King promised.

The hearing was demanded by the Georgetown Citizens Association and the Georgetown Progressive Citizens Association, at the insistence of Pinkney Love, 1234 33d st., nw. Love said his only occupation was to abolish "that stench."

The rendering plant manufactures poultry food and tallow, which it sells to soap makers. It buys surplus animal fat, bones, intestines and grease from stores and resturants. "That stench" comes from the cooking process.

King and Alvin Newmyer, representing the company, were asked to dinner last night in Georgetown to find out for themselves the quality of the odor. Both declined.

An 1875 ordinance makes the production of odors a nuisance and calls for a fine of from $10 to $100 for each day the offense continues.

Although residents claimed that the smell had existed unabated for 40 years, the company was first brought to court for a hearing in July, 1949. At that time, the company agreed to install ventilating ducts, spray nozzles, and vapor condensers.

This was done, but the stench remained.

"But we will have no guarantee that the smell will be gone when they do that," cried Mrs. Charles J. Hubbard, 1217 Potomac st. nw. "The company has already cost Georgetown more than $28,000. People refuse to rent houses near that stench."

"You people are just like the woman who came down here one day and demanded that we lock up her husband for being drunk when he had been drunk for 40 years," King answered.

"If this work has not been done by April 1, and the smell still exists, I start to prosecute," King said.

With flared nostrils, the citizens agreed.

New Executive Order Will Widen Scope Of Probational Jobs

ORDER: The proposed executive order that would place most Federal hiring on a temporary basis has been revised to allow additional probational appointments—appointments that would lead to permanent jobs.

Meantime, the order has been delayed and it won't be issued for another week or two. It won't be ready before the President's return next week.

As originally drafted, the order would limit probational appointments to "highly specialized jobs." As rewritten, it would permit them to be made under "exceptional circumstances."

The revision, it's explained, would open the way toward the making of probational appointments to many scientific, professional, and technical jobs. Otherwise, agencies fear, they would be unable to hire qualified persons to fill many of the jobs on a temporary basis.

STORY: At the Bureau of Mines each departing stenographer is presented with a small gift at a farewell party. At such an affair the other day a secretary was handed a long box by her supervisor. After she had removed the wrapping her eyes fell upon a label on the box that read:

Her face took on an expression of embarrassment and genuine misery as she pondered whether or not to open the box. She did after a moment of persuasion. In the box were two beautiful pink rosebuds.

MUNITIONS BOARD: It's being shaken up. A management study of the defense agency has been completed by the Robert Heller Co. of Cleveland. Board officials were reluctant to approve several of the reforms proposed by the private concern. Word has been passed down from the Defense Secretary to make them effective. That settles it.

NOTES: Larry Meloy, the able executive secretary of the Civil Service loyalty review board, is back on the job after a heart attack. . . . At the local Social Security office here, Abraham N. Mazur was awarded $65 for simplifying a form letter that will save Uncle Sam an estimated $1600 annually . . . Interior's highest award, a gold medal for distinguished service, was given to William G. Hoyt, director of its water and power division, on his retirement after 42 years of service . . . Mary E. Leach is retiring from the Army's Adjutant General's Office after 35 years of service . . . FCC has microfilmed its official minutes and has turned them over to the National Archives . . . Civil Service is accepting applications for these exams to fill vacancies in the Government Printing Office; bookbinder, $2.34 an hour, and printer, $2.43 an hour.

PATENT OFFICE: Michael Hertz has been promoted to chief of the new commissioner's examiners division at the Patent Office. Promoted to specialist jobs were: James S. Bailey, Abram Blum, George W. Boys, George A. Gorecki, James E. Keely, William A. Poppe, Irving L. Sragow, Richard A. Wahl, and George N. Westby. Members of the new unit are capable of handling any class of patent and trade-mark examination work.

REINSTATEMENT: How are reinstatements to be handled under the Whitten rider? The Civil Service has now answered the many questions from agencies and employes alike by releasing this policy statement:

"With the exception of one group, former employes may be reinstated in any grade for which they meet the requirements laid down by Civil Service.

"The excepted group are former employes who either have been or will be laid off in reductions of force after September 1. Those who are reinstated to nondefense jobs must be reinstated at their September 1 grades, no matter whether they were either demoted or promoted after that date.

"Those who are reinstated to defense jobs will be placed in jobs which do not exceed the salaries and grades held when they were laid off." The reinstatements, of course, must be made on a temporary basis.

River Pollution Seen As Public's Problem

Plants Hint Columbus Wasn't First

BALTIMORE, Oct. 11 (AP).—A Johns Hopkins University geographer believes Christopher Columbus was a Johnny-come lately.

The man Americans will pay their annual homage Thursday as the discoverer of the New World in 1492 A. D., probably was two or three thousand years late, Prof. George F. Carter writes in the Southwestern Journal of Anthropology.

Dr. Carter suggests the agricultural peoples of the Pacific made contact with the New World probably before 1000 B. C. and perhaps as early as 2000 B. C.

He bases his theory on the "known facts" that such plants as the sweet potato, yam, one type of hibiscus, cotton, Mexican poppy and certain weeds existed in both America and in Asia and some Pacific islands "long before any written record of man's having traveled between the two points."

Each of these plants, Dr. Carter writes, originated in one place and then turned up elsewhere, thousands of miles away. No plant originates twice, he said.

"The answer," he concludes, "is that man did make such unrecorded ocean voyages—probably in elaborate, giant canoes. In addition to plants, ancient explorers from Asia could have brought to the New World such skills as hieroglyphic writing, metallurgy and weaving techniques.

"At about the time of Christ, the inhabitants of the Old and New Worlds were in frequent contact and were exchanging information freely."

The sweet potato is a native of America, says Carter, yet the Polynesians were dining on sweet potatoes long before 1000 A. D. In Hawaii, this same vegetable is used as a symbol in the most ancient chants and myths. And there were acres of sweet potato lands in New Zealand when it was discovered officially.

"There can be no doubt that man carried the plant," Dr. Carter states. "Only the exact date remains in doubt."

Professor Carter's idea is that Asiatics sailed to America before the time of Christ—and centuries before Columbus.

Arlington County and Alexandria officials — under pressure to do something about Potomac River pollution—said yesterday the problem is strictly one for the public to solve.

An "open letter" to nearby Virginia communities to "do their part" came yesterday from Edwin R. Cotton, director of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

He said "fifth" exposed along the Potomac's banks between high and low tide "is a notorious feeding place for insects, particularly flies," which are capable of carrying disease into the home.

Thus the dangers arising out of near-cesspool conditions in the river "are not confined to those actually using the stream," Cotton declared.

He pointed out that the District and nearby Maryland "are actually engaged in a program of cleaning up their pollution."

In reply, Arlington County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan noted that county voters can approve or reject a $2,617,000 bond issue providing for improvement of sewage disposal facilities at a November 7 referendum.

"What else can we do?" Dugan asked. "The board has indorsed the bond issue. It's now up to the voters of Arlington County."

Paul O. Peters, a national director of the Izaak Walton League, said the "principal point of evasion" of sewage abatement "appears to be in Alexandria."

Peters said the Alexandria chapter of the league "is working on the problem there" with an information campaign.

Alexandria City Engineer C. Luckett interpreted the commission statement as an appeal to the people rather than to governing bodies.

He said Alexandria plans for a disposal plant already have been drawn up, but action on its construction is being held up pending the city's annexation suit against Fairfax County—slated to begin in Fairfax Circuit Court October 17.

If the city gets the 7.5 miles of county territory it wants, Luckett said, plans for the plant may have to be expanded. Present plant cost estimate is "at least four million dollars."

In Fairfax county, officials said voters already have indicated their approval of sewage abatement by approving a three-million-dollar bond issue last year to provide treatment facilities in the county area draining sewage into the Potomac.

Flames Take Life of Five-Year-Old Area Girl As Make-Believe Bridal Gown Catches Fire

Their make-believe in weddings was going smoothly Tuesday afternoon near a fireplace at the end of a row of houses on the Calvert Homes Housing Project in Riverdale, Md.

But there are more games than one to play. To Norma Jean Carrick, the dying embers of a fire in an outdoor fireplace may have meant some new "treasure"; perhaps it was just that the coals were pretty.

Her playmate, Dottie Lou Mathers, looked on horrified. In a moment, she knocked the flowing curtain from Norma Jean's head. But she was too late. The child's clothing was afire.

Norma Jean ran dazedly toward her home at 6539 46th pl. Her playmate screamed, "Her skin's coming off." A neighbor, Anthony Scarcia, 33, heard the screams.

"I could see her coming along, picking at the flames with her fingers as though she was trying to throw them away," he said.

He called to his wife for a blanket. When he reached the dazed child, he threw her to the ground, rolled her over, beat at the flames with his hands.

The child was rushed to Leland Memorial Hospital in Riverdale. But it was too late. Doctors said she suffered first and second degree burns over 80 percent of her body. Only her head and feet were unharmed.

She died there at about 1:45 a. m. yesterday.

Dottie Lou, who lives at 6544 46th pl., still did not realize what had happened yesterday afternoon. "I knocked the veil off her head, but she was on fire. I ran home to tell my mother."

Norma Jean is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Carrick, and two sisters, Barbara Marie, 7, and Catherine Louise, 7 months. Carrick is an oil burner mechanic for Griffith Consumers here.

ENDS IN TRAGEDY—Five-year-old Norma Jean Carrick of 6539 46th st. nw. was burned to death yesterday when a lace curtain "veil" she was wearing while playing as a make-believe bride was ignited in a trash fire. Anthony Scarcia, a next-door neighbor (left), suffered painful burns on the hands when he attempted to save her

Young Dope Addicts Held as Car Looters

The boys, one 17 and the other 16, were turned over to the juvenile squad of the Metropolitan Police Department for questioning.

Lieutenant William T. Reed of the Capitol police said he believes the two are members of a juvenile gang that has looted more than 50 cars on Capitol grounds over the past three months.

The boys have admitted to police that they have been taking heroin for about a year and were spending from $3 to $5 a day for the doses. They have asked to be sent to the United States Public Health Service Hospital for Drug Addicts in Lexington, Ky., to take a cure, police said.

Reed said the boys admitted thefts from cars parked on the Capitol grounds over a three-month period but refused to say where they had hocked their loot or what they did with the money they received.

The boys were caught after breaking into a car owned by Bert H. Kaster, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who was in the Capitol. One of the boys was nabbed at the scene. His companion was collared by Pvt. Frank Pierocich of the Capitol police after a chase of several blocks.

After their arrest the boys led police to their car, which belongs to the mother of one of the boys, and in the car police found a quantity of loot valued at $150 that included several gabardine top coats, a lady's purse, baggage and jewelry.

According to Reed, one of the boys is on probation from Juvenile Court on a robbery charge.

Keneipp Can't Win
14th St. Light Raises Ire of New Group

It's still anybody's guess who will win the battle of the traffic light at 14th and D sts. sw. But District Traffic Director George E. Keneipp is bound to be the loser.

A month ago Keneipp installed the signal as an aid to traffic and pedestrians crossing 14th at D. The motoring public protested as though he had cut down the cherry trees.

Last Monday Keneipp turned off the light to see if conditions were as bad as claimed. He got into more trouble over that. One woman wrote him "my blood will be on your hands "if she is hit by a car while trying to cross the highway at D st. And several motorists who drive through the intersection to work have called to protest, Keneipp said.

Test runs during the past two days have failed to show whether the light does more harm or good, he said. It takes less time without the light to drive from the south end of the new Highway Bridge through the D st. intersection (2 minutes 38 seconds during yesterday morning's rush as compared to 3 minutes 3 seconds last week). But it takes longer to drive from the bridge past D st. to Constitution ave. (6 minutes 38 seconds compared to 6 minutes 22 seconds).

These figures seem to indicate that the D st. light lessened the jam closer to downtown, Keneipp said.

The traffic director said he wasn't surprised that traffic moves past D st. faster without the light. "No one in his right mind would say traffic lights speed up traffic on one street," he said.

Two Suspects Held in $1100 Coin Robbery

General assignment squad detectives yesterday arrested two men suspected of hauling $1150 in coins away from a coin machine company truck Monday night. They were charged with grand larceny.

Police identified the suspects as George Washington Cooper, 24, of 1124 Columbia rd. nw., who gave his occupation as laborer, and Harold Sylvester Langford, 19, of 1508 6th st. nw., who said he is a boxer.

Both denied stealing the money which disappeared from a G. B. Macke Co. truck, parked in the 1300 block of R st. nw. Police said the pair was involved in a similar case before. They are not employed, police said. No money has been recovered.

Battle Predicted
Apartment Permit Asked For Estate

Owners of half of the Woodley estate, located in an exclusive residential section of northwest Washington, have asked the District Zoning Commission for permission to build five-story apartment buildings on it.

The property involved fronts on 29th st. and extends north to Woodley st.—nearly to the southern boundary of the Swiss Legation. A 140-foot strip along Cleveland ave. and a slightly narrower strip on 31st st. would be held for single-family homes.

Owners of the property, the application disclosed, are Thornton W. Owen, real estate appraiser and president of the Washington Board of Trade; Edward C. Baltz, building and loan official here, and Ned Bord, Washington real estate man.

Only Bord's name had been revealed last February when the former home of Henry L. Stimson and one-time "Summer White House" was purchased from Phillips Andover Academy.

Property facing the estate on 29th st. is now zoned for apartments, zoning officials said. On the other sides it is bounded by homes costing $75,000 and up, they said.

James C. Wilkes, attorney for the owners, said a "very de luxe apartment construction" is planned. The buildings would cover a very small part of the land, and the trees will be preserved "as far as practicable," he said.

If previous experience is an indication, the neighborhood will vigorously oppose the proposal at the hearing to be held in the District Building Board Room November 1.

Barse Plans Cleanup of Case Backlog

Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court promised yesterday to supply enough judges to clear up the backlog of 13 negligent homicide cases as fast as they can be set for trial.

The promise was made to United States Attorney George Morris Fay, who last week asked Judge Barse to assign a judge specially to hear negligent homicide cases.

Assistant United States Attorney Frank Strickler has been named to prosecute the cases. He said yesterday he plans to try at least one a week. The first case is scheduled for October 16.

2 Alexandria Firemen Injured Fighting Blaze

Two Alexandria firemen were injured last night in a two-alarm fire at the Truman Boyles Mattress Co., at 112 Fairfax st., Alexandria.

Harvey Lunsford, 63, of 307 Duke st., suffered a possible concussion, a possible fractured shoulder and scalp lacerations when a hose coupling burst and struck him.

Taylor Rudd, 38, of 309 King st., injured his elbow when he tripped over a hose.

Cause of the fire and amount of damage were not immediately available. Truman Boyles of 205 Washington rd., Alexandria, is the owner of the mattress company, firemen said.

K. of C. to Mark Columbus Day With Rites at Plaza Monument

Knights of Columbus ceremonies at the Columbus Monument on Union Station Plaza will highlight observance of Columbus Day today.

The ceremonies, with some 14 organizations laying wreaths, will get under way at 10 a. m. Music will be furnished by the Metropolitan Police band.

A luncheon will follow at noon in the Carlyle Hotel, with the Rt. Rev. Msgr. William E. Kelly, pastor of St. Martin's Church, giving the principal address.

Columbus Day memorializes the day in 1492 when Columbus first set foot on the soil of the New World.

Catholic parochial schools in the area will be closed for the day. Banks and other institutions also will be closed in nearby Maryland, where it is a legal holiday.

A dozen Knights of Columbus groups will lay wreaths at the ceremonies at Columbus Monument. Other wreaths will be laid by the Lido Club and the Garibaldi Lodge of the Sons of Italy.

Participants in the ceremonies will include C. Eugene Nichols, state deputy of Washington for the Knights of Columbus; Thomas J. Trodden, jr., deputy of District 1; Henry G. Catucci, director of District 2, and Thomas J. Trodden, sr., general chairman of the Columbus Day committee.

The day will be capped with a dance at 8:30 p. m. at headquarters of the Washington Council of Knights of Columbus at 1601 R st. nw.

Columbus will be the subject of a talk by Dr. Alexander Morales of the Inter-American Institute of Statistics at 8 p. m. at the Club de las Americas, Room 2631, Commerce Department.

Northwest Restaurant Robbed of $525

A thief or thieves broke into the China Doll Restaurant, 627 H st. nw., early yesterday and stole $525 in cash but ignored $500 worth of whisky and a $200 camera.

John J. Mooson, manager of the restaurant, reported the theft. Police found the kitchen window was forced. Two metal boxes—one containing $275, the other $250—were taken from a cabinet and pried open.

Rockville Boy Injured When Struck by Car

A broken right leg, lacerations and bruises were suffered by William R. Prevail, 12, RFD 3, Rockville, when he was struck by a car yesterday at 5:30 p. m. on Route 97 at Norbeck in Montgomery County.

His condition at Montgomery County Hospital, Sandy Springs, was undetermined.

2500 Polled on Highway Use During Columbia Pike Check

About 2500 motorists were polled along Columbia pike yesterday afternoon and evening on whither they were bound. Almost to a man the refrain was "Home."

As one of the checkers put it, "You'd think everybody who works at the Pentagon and the Navy Annex lives in Arlington and Fairfax Counties."

Yesterday's session was the final one of an origin and destinaton survey started 2 months ago on Shirley hwy. It was resumed Tuesday on Columbia pike by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads in cooperation with the Regional Highway Planning Survey of Metropolitan Washington.

Most of the motorists quickly elaborated on the "Home" answer to give the address, but one female declined at first. She challenged Checker Jerry Magner with:

"You asked me that 2 months ago on Shirley Highway and you haven't built anything or widened anything around here yet."

He explained that it takes a little longer than 2 months to build a highway or even to widen one and finally elicited the necessary information.

As the rush hour traffic built up beyond the checkers' capacity, Arlington County police sent about a fourth of the vehicles around the survey lane. The total traffic east and westbound on the pike during the 16 hours checked Tuesday and yesterday is expected to total more than 10,000 vehicles.

Program of Information on WORLD AFFAIRS

TEST NO. 1.

The Program of Information on World Affairs is sponsored by The Washington Post to promote popular interest in events of world significance. As a part of the Program The Washington Post publishes each Thursday of the school year a test on one of 26 topics of world affairs. The Program makes it possible for school children, adult groups and individuals to measure their knowledge of world affairs. It also includes a guidebook with study outlines on the 26 topics. The Program is directed by J. Edward Gerald, University of Minnesota Professor of Journalism, under guidance of Edgar B. Wesley, University Professor of Education.

Answers will be printed in The Post on Saturday. Some of the test questions may involve degrees of correctness rather than indisputable facts. In such cases select the BEST answer.

Fastest Route From Chevy Chase Is Through Rock Creek Parkway

Have you wondered whether you are taking the quickest route to work? TRAFFIC TRICKS, recommended routes developed from the Regional Highway Planning Survey of Metropolitan Washington, has the answer on the fast way to get to 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. or the Capitol.

RESIDENTS of Chevy Chase, Bethesda, Friendship Heights, and Bradley Hills, Md., should take this route—

The average peak traffic time is 23.3 minutes for the 8.5 mile distance. From the starting intersection it should take 2.8 minutes to the D. C. line.

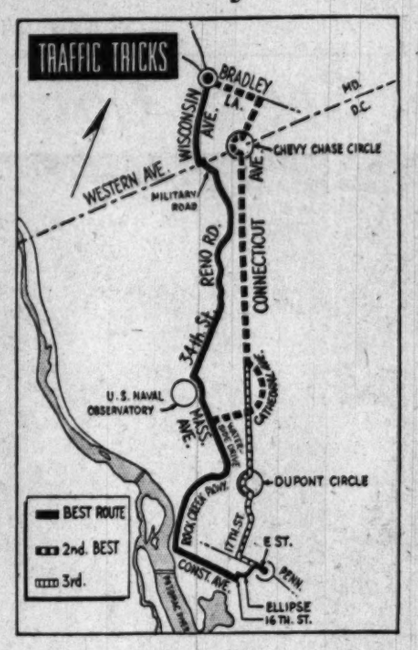
OTHER routes: Take Bradley la. through West Bradley la., right on Connecticut ave. through Chevy Chase cir., continue on Connecticut, left on Cathedral ave. through Rock Creek parkway, left on Constitution ave., left on 16th, right on Ellipse rd., right on E to 14th st. Time: 27.8 minutes for the 9 miles; 4 minutes to the D. C. line.

Or, take Bradley la. through West Bradley la., right on Connecticut ave. through the Dupont cir. underpass, continue on Connecticut, bear right on 17th st., left on E st. and South Executive ave. to 14th. Time: 29 minutes for the 7.2 miles; 4 minutes to the D. C. line.

Another route by which Cleveland ave. is used to reach the Rock Creek parkway adds 1.3 minutes to the first route listed.



The recommended route to the Capitol is via the first listing except that instead of turning into 16th, continue on Constitution to the Capitol. This should take 28 minutes for the 9.6-mile distance; 2.8 minutes to the D. C. line.

Hold Reception at Mayflower

D. C. DAR Fetes Birthday and National Officers

By Nicha Searle

More than 750 D. C. DARs celebrated their sixtieth birthday at a lavish reception last night. The ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel was crowded with the beribboned, corsaged patriotic ladies honoring six decades of DAR existence.

The receiving line moved slowly, probably because most of the local DARs took the opportunity to say a few words of greeting to Mrs. James B. Patton, president general and honored guest.

The line for admission to the Chinese Room, where the reception was held, stretched the length of the hotel, with the members standing five and six abreast. In the ballroom, a section of the Navy Band played while the ladies sipped coffee and tea.

Honored guests at the reception were the president general, Mrs. James B. Patton, and her cabinet who are in Washington for a national board meeting. The reception is a triennial affair given by the District Daughters in honor of the new officers elected at the April Continental Congress. The date this year marked a double celebration, the triennial reception and the anniversary of the founding of the DAR 60 years ago.

Mrs. James D. Skinner, state regent of the District, received the guests. With her in the receiving line were Mrs. Patton; Mrs. Loren Edgar Rex, first vice president general; Mrs. Leland Hartley Barker, chaplain general; Mrs. Warren Shattuck Currier, recording secretary general; Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, corresponding secretary general; Mrs. David M. Wright, organizing secretary general, and Mrs. John M. Kerr, treasurer general.

Also Mrs. Kenneth T. Trewhella, registrar general; Mrs. Hugh L. Russell, historian general; Mrs. Roland M. James, librarian general, and Mrs. W. H. Pouch, Mrs. Grace Brousseau and Mrs. Florence Becker, honorary presidents general. Rear Admiral Carlton R. Todd, USN (ret.), made the introductions to the receiving line.

The District Daughters also paid tribute to two of their members now holding national office, Mrs. Kerr, the treasurer general, and Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, one of the vice presidents general.

Miss Valle, Byron White To Be Married

Of interest to Washington is the announcement by Mrs. Inga Valle of Montreal of the engagement of her daughter, Borghild, to Byron White, Second Secretary of the American Embassy in Havana.

Miss Valle attended McGill University, the MacLaren Conservatory of Music, Carnegie Institute of Dramatics, Central Business College and studied art at the Museum of Art in Montreal.

For a number of years she has been executive secretary to the Norwegian Minister to Canada. In 1947 she was decorated for her contribution to the war effort made through the Montreal chapter of the Norwegian Red Cross.

Mr. White, prior to entering the diplomatic service in 1941, was a newspaper and magazine writer in Washington and New York. He was formerly on the editorial staff of The Washington Post. A resident of Fayetteville, N. C., Mr. White attended McGill University, University of North Carolina, George Washington University and the Graduate School of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The wedding will take place in Montreal early in March.

Fashion Takes the Larger View

By Evelyn Hayes

LO! THE POOR SIZE 40! For all the talk about this being a woman's world, once a woman achieves what may be called womanly proportions, she really has a hard time finding smart clothes.

If you wear women's sizes and have trouble finding what you want, don't blame the store. You can be sure the management there is trying hard, but the people who make clothes don't seem to produce enough fashion-wise clothes in the ampler sizes.

Of course, you CAN find good looking clothes, but it takes more than a bit of trying. Fortunately the new fall fashions with their slimmish skirts, oblique lines and apron or panel effects provide maximum figure flattery for the larger sizes.

CLUBWOMEN, AND WOMEN who work, will like several of the day dresses we have spotted around town; they're simple styles that flatter and are fine foil for jewelry. Garfinckel's has a beauty of a slim-looking dress in thin crepe with covered buttons streaking in oblique lines down the bodice and the skirt—very slim-making, this.

Faille revers are a fashionable detail of another good-looking simple crepe dress with three-quarter sleeves—this one at Erlebacher's. Jelleff's has several good daytime numbers for the woman who wears half sizes—i. e. 18½, 20½—a size range that offers better fit for many women who wear larger than size 18. Especially good are Jelleff's ensembles featuring long sleeved sheer wool dresses with their own jackets.

DESIGNERS MUST THINK that women spend most of their time at dress-up occasions, because there are plenty of dressy crepes around with touches of velvet, beading and braid.

A new fashion that is good in all size ranges, but especially good for the mature women is the barish-top dress with cover-up jacket. Joseph R. Harris has quite an assortment of these in half-sizes and women's sizes. We also noticed there a long sleeved black lace with satin ribbon banding on the underslip to shine through the lace—a good dress for its modest price.

For truly formal occasions a woman couldn't find anything lovelier than an off-shoulder black silk velvet at Garfinckel's. This is a dress that is bare enough in a season of bare decolletages—but not too bare to meet the figure requirements of a size 42. In any size this would be pretty as a picture.

FRINGED FELT adds a flattering soft touch to this new Knox tricorne, one of a special series of Knox hats that fits a 22½ headsize with ease. The birdcage veil is exceptionally flattering to a woman's face. In wine, gray, black or brown at Raleigh Haberdasher

Tapered Haircut on Its Way Out, Says Stylist

Fifth day of Edna's 14-day beauty program

By Ann Lawrence

EDNA'S RED HAIR, which should be, and could be . . . her outstanding feature, had been hacked away just before her summer vacation by a hairdresser to whom she had said: "Cut it short."

He did. He cut and tapered the ends away until they lay flat, with nary a curl, against the nape of her neck and the sides of her face. Improper thinning . . . that is, cutting the hair through the crown of the head, rather than tapering the full length of a strand of hair . . . caused the crown to look bushy and thick, while the ends were wispy and limp. Even though her hair was short, it seemed uncontrolled and completely lacking in the smooth, sculptured look she needed.

Victor Vito, the expert we visited, believes that the more the ends of the hair are thinned, the more they will break, tangle and cling flat against the head, rather than fluffing up into soft curls.

SAYS MR. VITO IN HIS new book, "Be Your Own Hair Stylist," "A good haircut gives you the benefit of the full growth of your hair because it is cut bluntly. Furthermore, your hair will look lustrous and healthy because of its freedom to fall into natural lines. Because of this, you need not fear the natural disorder which may arise from your normal activities. In many cases, you will not even need a barrette or pin to restrain it, because no matter how strenuous your activities become, your hair will always tend to bounce back into its pattern."

Methods of hair cutting have undergone a radical change in the past few years. Outmoded is the theory of thinning the hair, tapering the ends, and then giving a permanent. What is the sense, Victor Vito demands, of first removing the body of the hair by cutting, then restoring the body with a permanent?

A good hair cut, he explained to Edna, first attains the shape most becoming to the wearer. Second, it removes all the hair that interferes with that effect. Third, it is so cut that a woman can easily wash, set and care for her own hair at home.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 15, Is Daughter of an Old Southern Belle Who Gives Her Old-Fashioned Training and Permits Dates With Rich Boys Only, But She Has Secret Love

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the daughter of an old Southern belle. Mother is now 55 years old. I am 15 myself. Mother seems determined to make me into an old-fashioned girl. She is teaching me to sew, cook, care for babies (my sister's) and play the piano and violin.

Well, I don't have music in me, and I consider violins screechy old weapons built primarily to drive people crazy. Mother ridicules my efforts with the violin and shows me how well she can play, which indeed she can. As to sewing, I dislike it but patiently endure it. I don't mind cooking but it nearly wears me out. Is cooking my job? Besides a butler, we have two maids, either of whom can cook when necessary.

I am a senior in high school and would like to take law training. Mother won't countenance this and disapproves of career girls. My health isn't very good, as I have had pneumonia twice, but I had the very best of medical care. Mother has allowed me dates, but only with young men who are rich and have parents she particularly likes. Consequently I haven't had a date in four months, and while I am no raving beauty, I don't look like a horror either.

My stepfather regards my rearing process with amusement. He is a "good Joe," I guess, but is afraid to challenge mother's ideas. So much for background. I am in love, I am sure, with a man who is 19—I'll call him Jeffry. Jeffry has a very good job as a bank teller and he wants me to marry him. His family will give consent, but I am sure mother wouldn't. I've been seeing him secretly for quite a while. Should I marry him? E. L.

DEAR E. L.: It seems your personality has a quaint old-fashioned flavor. You sound early twentieth century. Back in the days when your mother was a girl, or at least not older than 25, Mary Roberts Rinehart was attracting fame with her hilarious but somehow tender stories about a sub-deb named Bab, an unforgettable adolescent (in the field of fiction) who was busy as a beaver trying to find loopholes in the gilded frustration of being a sheltered young thing.

Well, your letter reminds me of nothing so much as Bab speaking. In fact, I was tempted to consider this fiction, too—a gag of sorts aimed to test my powers of perception. Yet your correct note paper and childish penmanship give an air of authenticity to the earnest self-characterization, so I'll take it seriously. Anyway, false or true, it is a happy change of topic from the heavy subjects that confront me usually; and I think readers will find your prose pure pleasure, as I did.

Now, taking your story at face value, I think I ought to say at once, don't marry Jeffry. At any rate, don't marry him without being openly engaged for at least two years, or preferably three, starting now. Even then you'd still be running quite a risk of finding yourself tied to a big mistake if you marry him at 18.

There are qualities of originality, candor and strength implicit in your slant on things and manner of speaking that suggest a manifold person in the making. Thus the right husband for you will be somebody able to appreciate and keep up with your unfoldment as a complicated, subtly perceptive individual, as I believe you may be in maturity. And, somehow, Jeffry doesn't sound promising on that score.

Of course, you may say you could get a divorce, if worst comes to worst, and legally it might be simple enough; but the scars left by this type of amputation leave stwinges for life. So don't be in haste to commit yourself merely to escape the boring disciplines your mother imposes.

Time moves slowly for you now, but it will speed up to runaway pace as the years wheel by; and my advice is to pack as much "practice learning" into this period as you can, because you may never discover such leisure again.

The problem is that you are too lonely for your own good; and if I had your parents' ear I'd urge them to pay more attention to your social needs. You are heart-hungry for play companionship, and your parents should act intelligently to provide opportunities for you to make friends with an interesting variety of boys and girls who represent a cross-section of respectable society, not just the wealthy upper crust. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

MISS HENRIETTA FONTAINE HILL, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill of Montgomery, Ala., and Washington, D. C., will be married November 25 at the Church of the Ascension in Montgomery to Charles Clark Hubbard. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. T. Brannon Hubbard, also of Montgomery. The bride-elect attended Margaret Booth School in Montgomery and was graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington, and Sweet Briar College. Mr. Hubbard is a graduate of Washington and Lee University where he was a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He attended Barnes School in Montgomery and was graduated from Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Va. He is a veteran of World War II

They'll Call Her Madam by Remote Control

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE CURTAIN WILL rise tonight in New York on "Call Me Madam" without Washington's two controversial social leaders in the audience.

Neither Mrs. Perle Mesta, American Minister to Luxembourg, whose career is said to have inspired the musical, nor Mrs. Morris Cafritz, also a top D. C. hostess, will see the opening performance. Both, however, say they hope to see it sometime later.

Mrs. Mesta, home for State Department consulations, is too busy. Mrs. Cafritz, who was offered a box by the producer, Leland Hayward, for the first night, also has other engagements to which she and Mr. Cafritz were committed before the invitation came.

Before President Truman left for Missouri and the Pacific yesterday, Mrs. Mesta, an old friend, called at the White House to bid him Godspeed. Last night Mrs. Mesta was a guest at the dinner of 20 given by the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. LaGallais in honor of Luxembourg's Foreign Minister, Joseph Bech, who is also Minister of Defense. Although Luxembourg is not yet a member of the Atlantic Pact, Minister Bech is representing his government under Belgian auspices at the Atlantic Pact meetings being held in Washington.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW:

A DINNER FOR THE AUSTRIAN Foreign Minister, Dr. Karl Gruber, and Mrs. Gruber was given last evening at Prospect House by the Under Secretary of State, James E. Webb, and Mrs. Webb. Other guests were the Minister of Austria and Mme. Kleinwaechter, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George W. Perkins, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Edward W. Barrett, acting Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Raymond Muir, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Byington and Mr. and Mrs. Francis T. Williamson.

Earlier in the day the Foreign Minister was honored at a luncheon given by Minister Kleinwaechter at the legation. Today a large reception will be given in his honor at the legation.

PARTY PARADE

JOHN W. SNYDER, Secretary of the Treasury, yesterday took top financial figures on a midday cruise down the Potomac. Hugh Gaitskell, British Minister of Economic Affairs, was the guest in whose honor he entertained. Luncheon was served on board and a brief sight-seeing tour followed, the party taking just two hours in all.

Sir Leslie Rowan and Sir Henry Wilson Smith, officials of the British Treasury, were in the company, as well as Under Secretary of State James E. Webb; William C. Foster, ECA Administrator; W. Averell Harriman, special assistant to the President; Herbert E. Gaston, president of Export-Import Bank, and Edward H. Foley, jr., Under Secretary of the Treasury.

Also, John S. Graham and William McChesney Martin, Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury, and Spencer Love of Washington. Mr. Gaitskell leaves today for Ottawa, Canada.

LAST OF A SERIES of farewell parties for Mrs. Leigh Wade, who will sail on the Ile de France Saturday, was given yesterday at cocktail time by Gen. and Mrs. James B. Newman. Mrs. Wade, wife of our Air Attache in Athens, has been visiting her native Washington for several weeks.

Among those who came to say "bon voyage" were the Greek Ambassador, Athanese Politis, Gen. and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Zuckert, Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Allen, Col. and Mrs. Cortlandt Johnson from Georgia, Mrs. John Shugrue and Mrs. Stephen Burke (sisters of the honor guest), Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran (brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Wade), Mrs. Ruth Butcher, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Harold Stuart.

THE GOOSE LAID a golden egg for Countess d'Amecourt who opened her "Golden Egg" shop in Georgetown with a cocktail party yesterday. The Countess—Gertie to her friends—has, with her unfailing discernment, collected some beautiful silver, old flower prints, scarves from France and stoles of Persian gold and silver brocades.

Mme. Boheman, wife of the Swedish Ambassador, came with Mme. Anderberg, wife of the Swedish Naval Attache. Mrs. Robert W. Hasbrouck, wife of the general, and Mrs. Wayne Kittelle, were together. And among others in for the preview were Mrs. Harold Coolidge, the former Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska and Raymond Hazelbroek.

FOR A WORTHY CAUSE:

CHILDREN AND TEENAGERS from the embassies will represent more than 14 nations in "Children of the Globe," one of the 15 acts which make up the program of Red Feather Cavalcade this evening in Constitution Hall.

"Children of the Globe" will be staged by Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. George Perkins, Mrs. Rose Backalar Berman and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, cavalcade chairman for embassy talent.

Among the youngsters appearing will be Anne Baube, France; Marguérite Boniver, Italy; Jay Ku, China; William Hoppers, Canada; Princess Wan Waithayakon, Thailand; Katie and Alexandra de Bruine, Netherlands; Norma Campbell, Zinet Tizard, Jean Mitchell, Great Britain; Sevil Tulga, Turkey; Benedicta Chang, Korea; Tasewart Krishnayya and Dotty Bhimaya, India; Claire and Mary Hearne, Ireland; Gabriel Kajekas Lithuania; two daughters of Ambassador and Madame Sastroamidjojo, Indonesia, and Thor Thors, Iceland.

The girls in charge of the Latin embassy groups are Senorita de Mora and Senorita Maria Teresa Castro, daughter of the Ambassador of El Salvador.

Other nations to be represented include Greece, Philippines and Pakistan.

David McGrath, son of Attorney General and Mrs. Howard McGrath, will play the part of "Uncle Sam" in the pageant, and "Colonial Dames" will be Mimi Clark, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark; subdeb Nell McCracken, Josephine Black, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, and several others.

DATEBOOK DATA:

An historic tour of "George Washington County" is being planned by the Ladies Guild of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Wellington, Va., for Saturday, October 14. Less known landmarks like Quaker House, Old Grist Mill, and Tower House will be included in the tour. Tea will be served at beautiful Woodlawn, where the young women of St. Luke's Church will act as hostesses. Reservations may be made by telephoning Mrs. Robert C. Stevens of Alexandria.

THE AIR FORCE OFFICERS' WIVES CLUB, which normally holds its meetings on the second Wednesday of each month at the Army Navy Country Club, this month will move the date and place of meeting to Friday, October 13, at the Statler Hotel. A meeting will be held promptly at 1 p. m. followed by a fashion show and tea.

All Air Force wives in the Washington metropolitan area are invited. Reservations may be made with Mrs. C. J. Martin, or Mrs. P. E. Todd. Nursery facilities will be available in the District Room on the mezzanine floor.

SPEAKING OF SPEECH:

MME. VREEDE, wife of the First Secretary at the Netherlands Embassy, will be the first speaker at the opening session today of the Capital Public Speaking Classes at the Wardman Park Hotel. The class will be held in the Hamilton Room at 10:30 a. m., with Mrs. William E. Cole, jr., presiding. Others on the program will be Mrs. Enrique Touceda, Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, Mrs. Horace Smith, Mrs. Warren L. Stephenson and Mrs. Eugene J. Campton.

Lane Tells of Schools, Roads; McKeldin Cites City Record

BALTIMORE, Oct. 11 (AP).—Maryland's two gubernatorial candidates smiled at each other over luncheon plates today, shadowboxed at political issues for some 300 clubwomen, then went their separate ways to campaign elsewhere.

Attorney General Hall Hammond and State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes also addressed the Women's Civic League of Baltimore, but with Hammond's Republican opponent absent and Tawes unopposed, interest centered on the verbal jousting of Governor Lane and Theodore R. McKeldin.

McKeldin, Republican, used his allotted time—and more—almost wholly by naming the appointments he made while Baltimore Mayor from 1943 to 1947. His aim, he said, was to show he forgot political lines and picked the best men regardless of political party.

The list he read was scattered liberally with Democrats.

Briefly, Lane's argument was this:

When the war was over, the State found itself in a critical condition in its roads, schools and hospitals program. The teacher turnover rate was alarming—127 percent for one year in one of the counties. Hospitals were overcrowded, and the roads had been mangled.

His administration, Lane said, had met this face-on, and had taken corrective steps. For example, the State has built or is building 300 new schools accommodating 90,000 children, and the State's national standing has risen from twenty-sixth to sixth.

The roads program speaks for itself, he added, and state hospital expansion and improvement is moving forward rapidly.

McKeldin added these points to his record:

The big accomplishments Baltimore has made in the last few years actually were started during his (McKeldin's) administration as mayor. During his four years, 29 million dollars in school bonds were floated, the new airport was started, the Patapsco River project to give the city more water was begun, and the first one-way streets appeared.

Democrats Rally In School Tonight

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., Senator Millard E. Tydings, and State and county Democratic nominees will speak tonight at a county wide Democratic rally to be held at 8 p. m. at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase high school gymnasium.

Survey Slated For Oakview School Jam

Montgomery County school officials last night agreed to try to find more classroom space for pupils who are now on double shifts at the Oakwood Elementary School, Silver Spring.

A committee of citizens' association presidents will meet with school officials and with Dr. Nicholas L. Engelhardt, sr., school consultant for the county, to work out a plan to relieve overcrowding.

The plan was agreed on at a mass meeting of 500 citizens of the Oakview area who protested not only the double shift but also the fact that their children were moved from school to school in successive years.

Several parents who complained of the year-to-year shifts of elementary pupils said they helped to equip other schools and had their children moved each time.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools Richard Carpenter said 10 classrooms for elementary pupils will be available next September at the Eastern Suburban Junior High School now being built at Old Bladensburg rd. and Franklin ave.

Meantime, he said, two rooms are expected to be available this year at the Silver Spring Intermediate School. A number of parents objected that this would be outside their area and would mean the children would have to travel to school by bus.

The meeting was sponsored by the Clifton Park, Long Branch Village and Indian Spring Village citizens' associations and the Sligo-Branview Community Association. Their presidents will serve on the study committee.

Present were members of the County Council, County Manager Irving G. McNayr and four members of the board of education.

Carpenter said the county now has a school population of 27,800 or 3600 more than last year. The schools are overcrowded to the extent of 6000 white children, equalling 200 classrooms, and 2000 Negro children, he said.

The school department is also faced with the problem of keeping up to date high schools for rural areas, he declared.

Mrs. Durward V. Sandifer, member of the board of education, suggested that the county might obtain funds under pending legislation to aid schools in Government or military areas, and commended Mrs. Agnes Meyer's articles in The Washington Post urging adoption of this legislature.

Arlington School Plans Will Be Discussed

A rally to discuss Arlington County's proposed $7,450,000 school construction bond issue will be held at 8:15 tonight at the Abingdon Elementary School, Fairlington.

Speakers include Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, chairman of the Arlington school goard; Colin MacPherson, member of the board, and William A. Early, superintendent of schools. The rally is sponsored by the Fairlington Civic Association, Fairlington Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association, Abingdon Elementary School P-TA, and the League of Women Voters.

County Police Push Hunt for Drowned Girl

A detachment of Montgomery County Police from Rockville and Bethesda and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad will make a concentrated search today for the body of Roberta Gilbert, 13.

The girl, who lived at 3018 Massachusetts ave. se., was drowned in the Potomac River below Great Falls Sunday and medical estimates are that her body will probably rise to the surface today.

The search, which went on yesterday and Tuesday, will cover a five-mile stretch of rough terrain. In some spots where the going is too difficult to be done on foot, boats will be used.

The victim, daughter of Metropolitan Police Pvt. W. K. Gilbert, was drowned during a Girl Scout outing at the Falls.

Four Still at Large In Boys' Village Escape

All but four of 22 youths who escaped from Boys' Village, the Maryland training school for Negro youths at Cheltenham, have been rounded up, Supt. Lawson Veney said last night.

Ten were picked up Monday night and Tuesday in the vicinity of the school and eight more were taken into custody yesterday in Baltimore, he said.

Still at large is the youth believed to be the ringleader in the escape from the detention cottage just after supper. He was reported seen in Baltimore Tuesday night, Veney said.

Things I Never Knew About Chris

(Thanks to "The Decline and Fall of Practically Everybody" by Will Cuppy, edited by Fred Feldkamp. Published by Holt.)

Christopher Columbus was born October 12, 1452, at 27 Ponticello Street, in Genoa. He was the oldest son of Domenico Colombo, a wool comber, and his wife, Suzanna Fontanarossa, who also had four other children called Bartolomeo, Giovanni, Giacomo, and Bianchinetta. Bianchinetta married a cheesemonger named Giacomo Bavarello and went from bad to worse.

As a matter of fact, nobody knows anything about the birth of Columbus, but that's the general idea. Columbus himself said he was born in Genoa, but historians think that's too simple. He must have been holding something back. Columbus wrote a lot of fake facts about his youth, to confuse the historians.

Christopher was a very ambitious youth. He could see no future in combing wool, so he decided to discover something.

While he was wondering what to discover, he studied astronomy, geometry, and cosmography, and he seems to have got them a little mixed. He believed you could reach the East by going West. That is true enough, if you don't overdo it. You can reach L. I. City by taking the ferry for Weehawken, but nobody does it on purpose.

Columbus also thought the world was round, like an orange. This opinion was based on the works of Aristotle, Pliny the Elder, and Roger Bacon. It turned out to be right, though, and is now taken for granted except in some parts of the Bronx.

Men of learning were sure that the earth was round, but they just hadn't done anything about it. Some thought that the ocean sloped. They were worried about the trip back, uphill. Dr. Paolo Toscanelli, of Florence, when asked if India could be reached by going west said: "It would all depend."

About this time there was a mad passion for spices from the East Indies, and nobody could get any because the Turks had taken Constantinople from somebody. In those days people practically lived on pepper, ginger, cinnamon, and cloves. There were a good many nutmeg fiends, too.

Adding all this up, Columbus decided to discover a new route to Asia by sailing across the Atlantic. That was exactly the sort of thing he would do.

Ferdinand and Isabella, of course, were the best people to see about such things. Ferdinand was mean and stingy and not a bit nice, but Isabella was a regular peach. She would pawn her jewels if you struck her just right.

Ferdinand and Isabella kept Columbus waiting seven years, as they were very busy killing the Moors, persecuting the Jews, and burning Spaniards who didn't agree with them.

Columbus was rather trying, too, as he demanded 10% of the gross before he would discover anything. He would sit outside the convent of La Rabida sulking and saying nobody loved him.

Finally, on Friday, August 3, 1492, Columbus and 87 others sailed on the Santa Maria, the Pinta, and the Nina. Among those present were an Irishman named Will, an Englishman named Arthur Larkins, and a dear little cabin boy named Pedro de Acevedo, who soon became famous by running the Santa Maria into a sandbank and wrecking her one night while Columbus was asleep.

As an example of the efficiency with which the expedition was planned, Luis de Torrez, who knew Hebrew, Latin, Greek, Arabic, Coptic, and Armenian, was to be interpreter with the Great Khan, who spoke Chinese.

On September 17, the voyagers caught a live crab. On the nineteenth, a pelican came on board. On the twentieth, they saw gannets, or boobies. On the twenty-first, they spotted a whale.

Then, on Columbus Day, 1492, they came to an island which they thought was Guanahani, because the inhabitants kept saying "Guanahani!" So Columbus named it San Salvador, which later became Watlings Island or Cat Island or Great Turk Island, or it may have been three other islands. (If Columbus had not found it, we would still be Indians. Or would we?)

Then Columbus discovered plenty of other places, but none of the best ones, and gave them all the wrong names. He thought he was in the East Indies, but he was in the West Indies. That is what comes of going west to get east. He died without realizing what he had done.

Columbus was treated shamefully. But now that he's gone, he's perfectly wonderful. He was really first-rate, so almost everybody hated him. On top of everything else, Columbus was sentimental. When he returned to Spain, he told Isabella about the beautiful birds and animals and the strange plant life he had seen. She interrupted, asking: "How about the gold?"

On his fourth voyage, Columbus sailed along the coast of Central America trying to find the mouth of the Ganges River. It wasn't there, somehow. When he was off Honduras, Columbus had his supreme opportunity. But he missed it. A canoe full of Indians came alongside. If he had followed them home, he would have discovered Yucatan. But instead of continuing west, after the canoe, he turned east. (When you're in the Caribbean, you can't discover Mexico by going east.)

The savages on the islands Columbus visited wore rings of gold and earrings. When he asked about the gold, they pointed toward the south, but he didn't seem to get the idea. (There seems to be something about gold that most people want. It's so pretty.)

Columbus took back batatas, yam roots, Jamaica pepper, yuca root, Indian corn, bananas, plantains, cottonheads, tobacco, mastic resin, aloes, mangrove fruit, coconuts, bottled gourds, palm oil, an American dog, a kind of rabbit called ulia, lizards, stuffed birds, a stuffed alligator, and six Indians. (The Indians are getting brighter. Today the Indians are selling trinkets to us.)

In 1519 Magellan proved Columbus right about the earth's shape. People finally found out what was what.

They think they have the bones of Columbus in Ciudad Trujillo. They think they have them in Genoa and Seville, too.

Teacher Jailed As Arsonist at U. of Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 11 (AP). A scholarly University of Michigan Latin teacher who said he had been "studying hard and not feeling well" admitted today that he burned down Haven Hall, a campus landmark, last June.

Stacy

Robert H. Stacy, 30-year-old teaching fellow from Gowanda, N. Y., was charged with arson. He was jailed in default of $15,000 bond after waiving municipal court examination in favor of a circuit court hearing next Tuesday.

Prosecutor Douglas K. Reading said Stacy attempted to leap into a stair well from the seventh floor of a downtown building after the warrant was signed. Police restrained him.

Stacy readily volunteered that "I did it" when Judge Francis O'Brien referred to the fire. Police said Stacy, an overseas veteran of World War II, had been undergoing treatment recently at the veterans' readjustment center in University Hospital here.

Police were attempting to link Stacy with a $250,000 fire at a Montgomery Ward warehouse here Monday night.

Arrested on a tip from several persons from Massachusetts, Stacy was questioned here yesterday and then taken to East Lansing for a lie detector test. After all-night questioning there, he admitted he set the fire by touching a match to a roll of maps on the second floor.

Off the Air

Duff Sorry Spade Couldnt Show Up

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—"I'm sorry Sam couldn't show up. He's not very reliable, you know. Probably out on a case."

This was Howard Duff jesting about Sam Spade, the radio sleuth Duff has been playing on the air. He admitted feeling a little lonely without Sam, from whom he parted company three weeks ago. The program was yanked off the air.

Duff

"It was very simple," Duff explained. "The sponsor wanted a cheaper show."

BUT WHAT SEEMED like a simple cancelation of an air show has created something of a furor. The sponsor has reportedly been flooded with a wave of letters, many of them of a threatening nature. The NBC offices here have received protest letters executives say total 45,000, with other parts of the network not yet counted.

NBC, which has no further connection with the show, is reportedly peeved over what to do with the mail. The network was further upset by zealous members of the Howard Duff Fan Club, which set up a picket protest at the studio after Sam Spade was canceled.

"I'd hate to see the old boy die off forever," he remarked. "After all, we've been together 4½ years without a vacation or summer layoff. You can grow fond of a person in that time."

NOT TO MENTION the moola which the weekly show brought in. And Duff can credit Spade for bringing him to film fame. He was just another free lance radio actor when he tried out for the show. Much to his surprise, he landed the role.

His radio fame led him to the movies, and the late Mark Hellinger picked him for "Brute Force" and "The Naked City." He caught on with the bobbysocked crowd and currently leads at least one of the movie magazine popularity polls.

Duff said he hoped to return to the air with Spade, but he has his doubts. Radio is still suffering from the TV jitters and many another top show is languishing without a sponsor.

"Any sponsor who buys Sam will want the TV rights, too," he said. "I can't get tied down to a weekly TV show and do pictures. That would interfere with the deal."

Also, there is a legal snag. Warner Brothers has sued to stop the air show. Sam Spade is the character Humphrey Bogart played in "The Maltese Falcon" and the studio claims it owns all rights The case has not been settled.

SAM HAS BEEN the most popular private eye on the air and Duff offered his theory: "I think it's because Sam doesn't take himself seriously. He can always see the humor in a situation.

"Still, he can be tough when he needs to be. He's a man of extremes. When he's in good spirits, he's higher than anyone. But when he's low, there's nobody lower."

"Ah, I'll miss him," sighed Duff, and I thought I saw a tear drop into his cup of black coffee.

It Looks Like Herblock Got 'Took'

Cab driver Harry Aberts of 2522 S. Monroe st., Arlington, Va., will be surprised to learn that I know all about a wager he won from a passenger recently.

He'll probably be even more surprised to learn that his fare was our famous Pulitzer Prize winner, Cartoonist Herblock.

That's how I happen to know about the wager. Herb told me.

It was the last day of the World Series, and Herb was in Harry's cab. The radio was tuned to the pre-game broadcast of the lineups.

"Gee," mused Herb, "I wonder if the Phils can stop them today."

"I don't know who's going to win," replied Harry, "but I'll bet you a dime I can tell you the score before the game starts."

"You have a wager, my friend," said Herb with alacrity.

Our Mr. Block paid off.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Every motorist, I think, has a fear of the vagaries of a bicycle rider. I, for one, creep past them with an eagle eye, watching their wavering progress.

But, from my son, I have learned that bike riders have their problems, too.

They have to ride on the right side of the road, directly alongside parked cars. All too often, some careless motorist throws open his left door without looking to see if anybody is coming.

This results in collisions, and the bicycle rider may be thrown to the street and seriously injured.

May I voice a plea through your column that we motorists be more careful?

Mrs. S. Dillon Smith
402 Aspen st. nw.

Dear Mrs. Smith:

Up to a few nights ago, I almost invariably got out of my car on the left (street) side. Too lazy to slide across the front seat to emerge from the curb side, I guess. But I've been frightened out of that foolish habit.

I was driving along Minnesota ave. se. It's entirely too narrow for the huge amount of traffic it carries, and parked cars line the curbs, because few apartment houses provide any off-street parking facilities for their tenants.

As I topped the crest of a hill, oncoming headlights hit me in the eye, and I cringed an extra few inches to the right, against the line of parked cars. And just at that instant, some birdbrain flung open the door of his car and began to alight.

Fortunately, Mr. McKee's mechanics did a good job of tightening my brakes the last time they serviced my Pontiac, and I didn't have to face a coroner's inquest.

But from now on, believe me, I'm getting out the right-hand door. The other guy may not have such good brakes.

Bill

Mafia Has Strong Powers in U. S.

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's note—This is the second column in Drew Pearson's report on the Mafia, secret "black hand" society which rules the underworld.)

How a group of Italian-Americans has been able to dominate the big crime rackets of the Nation, spreading murder and political corruption in their wake, is one of the least-known stories of the U. S. A.

Costello

The complete story may never be told. For it is locked behind the lips of men who have sworn to die rather than talk, and whose campaign contributions to big politicians have largely put them outside the law. Senator Kefauver of Tennessee is the only man, so far, who has had the courage to beard this gang of criminals.

Meanwhile, a roll call of their leaders, never before published, gives important insight into the power and ramifications of the Mafia. The roll call begins in New York City with Frankie Costello, the man who carried a suitcase to Ellis Island on the morning his chief, Lucky Luciano, was deported back to Italy.

Early in Costello's career he was financed by New York underworld boss Arnold Rothstein, whose records show a loan of $21,000 to Costello in 1928. Costello is known to have shared quarters with Tammany Hall politician Jimmy Hines at the 1932 Chicago convention which nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It was Costello, also, who made peace in the underworld after the "roaring 'twenties." He laid out $25,000 of his own money to call a convention of gangsters at the Hotel President in Atlantic City, where they allotted territories and cemented alliances.

Costello operated the slot-machine business through the Tru-Mint Novelty Co. in New York City, then organized the Pelican Novelty Co. in New Orleans. He also formed the Alliance Distributors with Phil Kastel, becoming the sole agents for King's Ransom Scotch whisky with royalties of $35,000 per month.

Joe Adonis (real name Joseph A. Doto) of New York and New Jersey—Adonis also grew up in the bootlegging industry, mysteriously inherited most of the Brooklyn rackets after the murder of Frankie Uale, was a golfing partner of Lucky Luciano, Meyer Lansky and Jimmy Hines at Hot Springs, Ark., in the 1930's. Following repeal of prohibition, Adonis moved into the wholesale liquor business, is now active in the New Jersey rackets and recently muscled into the automobile business.

Antony Carfano (alias "Little Augie" Pissano) of New York and Florida—Carfano is tied closely with Joe Adonis, worked under him in Brooklyn, shared Adonis' inheritance of Frankie Uale's Brooklyn enterprises, now spends considerable time in Miami. Carfano's criminal history dates from 1916, when he was arrested for felonious assault. He was also once a fugitive on a murder charge, has been arrested for grand larceny, carrying concealed weapons and for violation of the Loafer Act.

Vito Genovese of New York and New Jersey—Genovese was Lucky Luciano's gunman. He gained notoriety helping Luciano terrorize tributes from New York's brothels, fled from New York to New Jersey and now is an important cog in the New Jersey Mafia. His criminal history dates back to April 15, 1917, when he was arrested in New York City for possessing a revolver and got 60 days. Since then his power has grown. He has been arrested for carrying a concealed weapon, felonious assault, homicide, disorderly conduct, burglary, petty larceny, and first-degree murder. However, he was acquitted of the murder charge.

Joe Profaci of New York and New Jersey—Born in Italy October 2, 1897, is married and has six children. He was arrested in Cleveland on December 6, 1928 in a raid on a hotel room where the Mafia grand council was reportedly meeting. Thirteen revolvers were found in the room by Cleveland police. For many years he has been operating the Mamma Mia Importing Co. in Brooklyn, which packs olive oil and jobs canned tomatoes. Has a police record in New York and Cleveland.

Willie Moretti of New York City and Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.—A close associate of Frankie Costello, who is the godfather of Moretti's children; is now part of the ruling mob in New Jersey, and helped train Joe Sica, now a narcotics racketeer on the West Coast. Moretti's criminal history dates from 1913 and includes arrest for robbery, carrying concealed weapons, homicide and burglary, but no convictions.

Mike Limandri of New York City and California—has important Mafia ties both in New York and on the West Coast, and the Narcotics Bureau has been after him as leader of the gang smuggling opium from Mexico to the United States. Limandri now spends the greater part of his time in San Bernardino, is close to the Mafia boss on the West Coast, Jack Dragna. His criminal history dates from 1935 when he was arrested in connection with shipment of morphine and counterfeit money through the mails. He was not convicted.

Phil Kastel—Before the First World War, "Dandy Phil" Kastel was a night club operator in Montreal. Migrating to New York City during World War I, he became a badger-game operator, emerged into the big time as the protege of Arnold Rothstein, once served a sentence for a security swindle in Fonda, N. Y., and came out to take up a partnership with Frankie Costello in various enterprises. Though not a Sicilian, Kastel has been adopted by the Mafia.

Carlos Marcello (real name Carlos Minacora) of Meroro and Gretna, La.—is the real boss of the Mafia in Louisiana. He was reported to have been picked for the job by Frankie Costello at a meeting in New Orleans' Black Diamond night club in 1947. Known as "the little man," Marcello is the No. 1 gangster and racketeer in Louisiana.

Marcello is tied in with Costello and Kastel through the Beverly Country Club outside New Orleans in which he owns a 17-percent interest, but seems to have equal voice with Kastel in the management. His brother, Peter, arrested on a marijuana charge in 1942, is floor manager. Marcello also purchased the new Southport Club in Jefferson parish for $160,000, May 1, 1948. His partner is Victor Trepani.

Marcello's criminal record goes back to 1929, when he served a year and a day for a marijuana violation. Though not a citizen, the immigration authorities ruled on December 3, 1938, that Marcello did not appear to be deportable. Yet he served five years of a 9-to-14-year sentence for assault and robbery, later was granted a full pardon by Gov. O. K. Allen on July 16, 1935. Since his release from Atlanta Penitentiary, Marcello has been arrested four times.

Marcello's holdings include dozens of bars, taverns, garages; also the Dixie Coin Machine Co., Jefferson Music Co., B. Robertson Distributing Co. and Fogarty's News Service.
